Armin Walpen Director General of SRG SSR idée suisse, Host of Input 2007

Input invites us to reflect on the meaning and the future of public service broadcasting. Evaluating programmes is an integral part of our daily work. We uphold quality entertainment; we aim to remain a recognized source for believable and independent news coverage; and we pay special attention to all aspects of society, both within and outside the mainstream. Our range of programming acts as a critical force, an alternative to sensationalized content.

This is not a contradiction, but rather part of a continuous process in which it is essential to know how to respond appropriately, without falling back on textbook solutions. All the more so, when modes of access to programming content are becoming increasingly diverse and technologically advanced: from High Definition to mobile information and internet services “on demand”.

The search for new content and new formats would be meaningless, without the will to understand how the advent of new technologies continues to change the way we work. We are moving from a pyramidal hierarchy, in which an exclusive number of professionals selects and arranges content for everyone else, toward a structure in which the users play an active role in exchanging and arranging media products. The public will migrate toward those services which best correspond to their interests, forming clusters of reference created in line with specialized approaches and inclinations.

We are faced with a variety of questions. Above all, the question of responsibility. The uninterrupted flow of texts, images and sounds does not necessarily guarantee quality or the democratization of information. A further important question is that of the generation gap, which could be widened by advances in technology combined with a rigid selection of content.

A public service broadcaster must also consider the question of its status: a “reactive” service based on established and definitive norms? Or rather a service which offers open paths toward a future which is yet to be determined? The concept of “offering” programming should return to its original meaning, which also involves dialogue with the public – a public we know is becoming increasingly connected, which will continue to seek means of interacting with programming content as it is proposed by broadcasters.

It is with special pleasure that I welcome the Input Conference to Switzerland, where it will continue to raise these and other questions. Both the evening panels, and the rigorous selection of programmes produced around the world during the past year, will allow us to examine the merit of our most recent activities and to confront the uncertainties which also provide the stimulus for our future work.

Claudio Generali President of Input 2007

As the president of Input 2007 I extend a warm welcome and wish you a productive stay in Ticino. Along with my good wishes, I would also like to offer some reflections on the legitimacy of financing for public service radio and television.

Most public broadcasters depend on a system of mixed funding, where income from licence fees is supplemented by advertising and sponsoring. The extent of this additional income varies from country to country, but essentially all broadcasters face the same problem: the need to secure future funding for on-going productions – where costs increase more quickly than the rate of inflation – but also for the urgent investments required by continuous technological developments.

Many of the current debates about public service broadcasting start from the assumption that the audiovisual media sector differs from other forms of industrial production, especially because it is meant to fulfil specific goals in the public interest and for the general benefit of society. Television, even more so than radio, has been a great equalizing force within modern society. At the same time, television has been open to a multiplicity of voices of differing social or regional origin, all of which coexist within a national territory. SRG SSR idée suisse, the host of Input 2007, provides a good example. Following a secular tradition of coexistence, Switzerland's public radio and TV broadcaster has dedicated enormous resources to programmes for linguistic minorities, in order to promote tolerance between diverse ethnic and cultural groups. The resources required to fulfill a task of such vast dimensions would be unthinkable within a company based solely on commercial principles.

Although there is a broad consensus about the assumption that public broadcasters' management of radio and TV in the public interest can provide important benefits to society as a whole, there is no consensus when it comes to the question of which methods should be used to achieve these objectives. Public funding has become an uncomfortable issue; especially the recent proliferation of content providers and the ensuing fragmentation of audiences has raised the question of its political legitimacy. Licence fees, as a non-progressive form of taxation, are facing increasing opposition. Perhaps it would be more fair to institute a system of direct financing by the government: radio and TV, like other public service sectors, would receive funding through public expenditure. But how would this proposal affect the broadcasters' independence? What would happen to the continuity and stability of their funding, if it were to be linked with the government's fiscal and economic policies? And what about direct interference by the political powers?

I believe the time has come to take into consideration new models for public service broadcasting. It is possible to imagine alternative ways of collecting fees, in the same way that we are constantly engaged in rethinking new programming models.

Tiziana Mona Director of Input 2007

It has taken thirty years for the spirit of Input – which first saw the light in Bellagio, on the shores of Lake Como – to return to the region and reach Lake Lugano, located just a few kilometres away. Thirty years is not a long time if we take into account that this spirit is as lively as ever and that many of us are prepared to devote our labour, means and creativity to it. But it seems like a long time if we look at the epocal changes which have occurred within audiovisual media around the world during these past three decades.

At the Lugano conference we will have the opportunity to relive some of the pioneering spirit that characterized the Bellagio meeting, which was attended not only by representatives of the most important public service broadcasters in Western Europe and North America, but also by a representative of the avant-garde of video art: Nam June Paik. We are thus very proud to announce that Input 2007 will feature a selection of important works by the great Korean-American video artist who passed away last year. In addition, we provide Input participants with the opportunity to discuss the relationship between video art and television, and to discover that there are still spaces within which such creative encounters may occur.

Above all, however, Input 2007 will be the place to screen innovative projects, to reflect on possibilities for the future, and to discuss how public service broadcasting may respond to these new developments. The challenge is global, and requires global solutions. However, the question remains: to what extent may a proposed model be applied across the board, and to what extent – given our fundamental responsibility to inform, educate and entertain – must public service programming continue to be tailored to a specific cultural context?

At the same time, we must not forget that Input is also a festival: a feast of ideas, discoveries, and debates; a special opportunity to get to know a country and its people, culture, traditions and cuisine. We will do our best to ensure that your stay in this southern corner of Switzerland is as pleasant, and full of new discoveries, as possible.

Noemi Schory President of Input

Input was launched exactly 30 years ago as a North American and Western European exchange of ideas and programmes. Today Input includes programmes and delegates from all continents and more than 60 countries. Input began at a time when public service broadcasting was uncontested, but its founders were aware that without innovation, stagnation sets in. Input is a miracle which survives without bureaucracy, funding or infrastructure: it runs on passion, imagination, loyalty and that precious volunteer spirit.

Input is neither polite nor politically correct. We question and challenge the programmes, the filmmakers, the decision makers and the whole milieu of broadcasting. In a world where there are film festivals every single day, Input is unique because: it places the individual programme and programme maker at the heart of the conference; it is a television conference made for professionals by professionals; it gives professionals the opportunity to devote a week to reflecting on the innovations and challenges of the profession together with their peers from around the world; and it offers no red carpets and no prizes, but simply the passion of the story, the programme, and the craft that went into making it.

Input contributes to global TV excellence by helping participants keep abreast of developments around the globe. We deliberately seek out programmes that answer some of the dilemmas faced by every public broadcaster. How to make prime-time programmes that are both popular and intelligent? How to attract younger viewers while retaining older ones? How to produce quality fiction with shrinking budgets? How to make arts and culture coverage more attractive to viewers? How to cover sports events which demand prohibitive licence fees?

When you leave the Input conference, you are filled with fresh ideas for programme innovations which you can try in your own constituency. You have enlarged your network of international contacts and potential partners. You are empowered by the understanding that you are not alone, but part of a family of people who care passionately about television storytelling and who are aware of its power and responsibility.

In these times, when globalization and free market slogans threaten to drown out diversity, public television must fight back with better, more original programmes and with imaginative use of the new technologies. It must confront those who regard culture as a commodity and viewers merely as consumers. It must do so with the kind of bright, attractive, thought-provoking programmes which you will find here. The conference, dear delegates, is yours. Your discussions and debates will bring it to life. We hope that while you enjoy the beautiful scenery of Lugano, you will also help make this 30th year of Input a great one.

Giorgio Giudici Major of Lugano

Lugano, with its 14 districts, is the largest city in Canton Ticino, as well as its economic hub. It is home to Switzerland's third largest financial centre and boasts a rapidly expanding commerce and tourism sector. Lugano is a thriving city, and is currently devoting its energies to a number of large-scale urban development projects, and to dynamic promotional strategies on an international scale.

Lugano has a long cosmopolitan history, sustained by residents of over 140 nationalities and by widespread knowledge of the three national languages and English. These aspects have shaped the city, giving it a spirit of openness which encourages encounters between individuals and cultures.

The landscape in and around Lugano features magnificent panoramas year-round, thanks to the presence of the lake and the mountains beyond. I hope that Input's conference delegates will have the opportunity to take in some of this beauty.

From Renaissance times until today, the region around Lake Lugano has maintained a tradition of producing excellent architects; Mario Botta is currently the most prominent example. With the Università della Svizzera italiana, Lugano has developed another important source of technical know-how, providing in-depth education in media studies and audiovisual production.

As we know, with the liberalization of the market and the development of modern communication technologies, audiovisual production has become much more complex and specialized, not to say increasingly fragmented and highly competitive. The relationship between television broadcasters and spectators has been radically transformed, moving toward user-generated content. In this situation, the sophisticated television viewer may enjoy a wider range of choices, but the excess of information can also be disorienting – for older as well as younger audiences.

And yet, fulfilling the public service mandate – whether with educational programming, cultural coverage, or entertainment formats – is becoming an increasingly important task with implications for society as a whole. Public broadcasters play a crucial role in preserving regional and national identity and local traditions, thus counterbalancing the levelling out of diversity caused by media globalization.

For this reason, I am especially delighted that Lugano is home to this year's Input conference. On behalf of our city, I extend my congratulations and my thanks to the Swiss Broadcasting Corporation, and most particularly to the TSI, for their initiative in organizing and hosting this event.

I wish all Input delegates a very pleasant stay in Lugano. I hope that, alongside your fruitful discussions on the future of public service television, you may also find time to discover our city and our region.

- Taste Ticino wine at its source

Social Events

Take a boat ride around Lake Lugano

Departure 17:00 from the pier Debarcadere

Take a stroll from the Palazzo dei Congressi down to the pier and enjoy a boat ride around scenic Lake Lugano. Return to Lugano around 19:00.

Visit a medieval castle in Bellinzona

Departure 16:30 from the bus parking lot near

Piazzale Conza

The castles and city walls of Bellinzona were built in medieval times. Today they have been restored and are a recognized UNESCO World Heritage site. Take the guided tour of Castelgrande, one of the city's three castles. Return to Lugano around 19:00.

Taste Ticino wine at its source

Departure 16:30 from the bus parking lot near

Piazzale Conza

Visit one of three wine cellars to taste Merlot, Ticino's principal variety.

Cantine Brivio e Gialdi, Mendrisio (20 km south of Lugano). Cellars hewn into the rock of Monte Generoso. Due to the natural fresh air vents, these cellars have a micro-climate particularly suitable for the preservation and aging of wines.

Cantina Delea, Losone (45 km north of Lugano). This ancient cellar boasts a distinct architecture typical of previous centuries. It also contains a museum of wine-making.

Cantina Tamborini, Lamone (7 km north of Lugano). 30-hectare vineyards operated according to an advanced concept of environmentally friendly organic production.

Return to Lugano around 19:00.

Input 2008 One for the Road

Palazzo dei Congressi, Entrance Hall, ground floor

Friday 11th May, 18:30–20:00

Admission free

Hosted by Input 2008

Input for Africa.

The first time the South Africans hosted a "One for the Road" party was in Halifax in 2000 and people were banging on the doors of the Convention Centre late at night, wanting to join in. Several years later, Input is going to Africa once again. Input 2008 in Johannesburg will be a pan-African affair, so join us for a "One for the Road" that takes us back to Africa, back to the Cradle of Humankind, back to the Beginning.

We'll introduce Input 2008 – the first time a whole continent joins hands to produce the annual screening conference – and give you a taste of African hospitality with food, wine and music from Capetown to Cairo.

GROUND FLOOR

For thirty years Input (INternational PUBlic Television) has explored the frontiers of television, debunking the myth that television cannot be both “popular” and “of high quality” at the same time. We firmly believe that access to the most honest, innovative, provocative, courageous and challenging broadcasting is a universal fundamental human right. For thirty years Input has organized international television’s most important and influential screening conference. It is an event that encourages the development of public service tele-vision by screening and debating the most outstanding programmes from around the world. Input also organizes many other activities in dozens of countries, providing a unique professional development opportunity for producers, directors, writers and all those – including independent producers – who contribute to public broadcasting throughout the world.

What is Input?

A global meeting for TV professionals

Many of television’s most important innovations are shown first at the annual Input Screening Conference. Each year, in a different city, an estimated 1,400 television professionals from 60 countries and five continents gather together for one special week in the month of May to screen 80 hours of the world’s best TV programming. Most importantly, the producers and directors who made these remarkable programmes are in attendance at Input, eager to debate and discuss their work. The Conference is a rare opportunity to see and question what colleagues from other cultures are doing and to explore methods and techniques with peers from other countries. Even though Input is not a professional TV market, the Screening Conference is an extraordinary networking opportunity: many co-productions, joint ventures and sales have been conceived at our gatherings. Input encourages the highest quality television programming worldwide and diversity in excellence. Input supports television as a service to the public and promotes discussion and debate about the television craft. And it recognizes TV’s potential to promote better understanding among the world’s different cultures.

How the Conference works

At the annual Input Conference, the lights go down in three big screening rooms. Three different programmes roll. English is Input’s working language: all non-English programmes are subtitled.

When the lights come up again, an Input moderator – an experienced professional from one of the dozens of countries of Input – introduces the programme maker, and the debate ensues. Debating may take place in French, Spanish, Italian and English, since simultaneous translation is available. After the screening, the delegates have the opportunity to meet and talk with the producers and directors face to face. On-demand screening rooms are set aside for delegates to catch up on programmes they may have missed, or want to re-screen.

What is Input?

Programme Selection:

One hundred TV programmes chosen out of thousands

Every year, producers around the world are invited to submit programmes to the National Selection Committee, which is comprised of broadcast professionals from their countries. These committees are led by Input's National Coordinators, respected television-makers representing each country or region involved in Input. The recommended programmes are then sent to an international Selection Committee, which for ten days each February reviews the hundreds of submissions, choosing 80 to 100 programmes to screen at the upcoming Input Conference.

Input selectors look for programmes that:

- are innovative, original, unusual, controversial, courageous or experimental in form and content
- go beyond conventional formulas in order to find new ways to reach the public
- serve the public interest by addressing the viewer as a citizen, not as a consumer
- will stimulate debate and discussion during the Conference.

The Input Archive, a precious resource

The Input Archive is a collection of the programmes screened at the Input Conferences from the first meeting in Milan, Italy in 1978, to the most recent. The Input Archive is a reference tool aimed at television professionals and academics. It includes over 1,600 tapes of TV programmes from all over the world that were selected by Input for their innovative value, their courage in addressing difficult topics or their willingness to explore uncharted TV territories. The Archive database includes information about over 2,800 programmes screened at Input. The Input Archive, located at Pompeu Fabra University (PFU) in Barcelona, Spain, was started in 1994. It is the result of an agreement between PFU's Audiovisual Communication Department and Input's International Board.

What is Input?

It all began 30 years ago

"The setting could not have been more remote from the nature of our purpose. The Villa Serbelloni's seductions were enough to cloud the reason and render serious thought irrelevant. Until our arrival, the Villa had never been shadowed by the blue-gray beam of the television tube."

James Day Input co-founder and author of the chronicle Input at 20 (An informal memoir of past glories... and a few less-than-glorious episodes), Input Honorary Board Member.

Input was born during a conference organized by CIRCOM (the European Association of Regional Television) and the Rockefeller Foundation in Bellagio, Italy in 1977. The founders were motivated by the need for an international exchange of quality programmes and ideas between North America and Europe. Providing that exchange continues to be Input's main goal, but over time the challenge has been extended to include participants and programmes from all continents. This geographical expansion allows delegates to view a multitude of programmes with a wider expression of audiovisual cultures and interests. Input's goal of renewing the medium puts innovation – fresh content with inventive new modes of presentation – as the principal criterion for programme selection. Screening of these programmes, and the critical exchanges with those who made them, is the living expression of what the flow of communication must be. Input constantly works on improving its organization, its selection of programmes and the quality of the discussions taking place each year.

"People came, and still come, to present their own programmes and to watch others' work, to criticize, debate and stock up on new ideas. We are a marketplace of ideas."

What is Input?

Three Artists in the Spirit of Input

Input is many different things. One of them is being a platform for innovative, provocative, contemporary image-based artistic practice.

Homage to Nam June Paik (1932–2006)

Nam June Paik was not only one of the most renowned and influential media artists worldwide, but also a founding member of Input. Thirty years after Input's founding meeting in nearby Bellagio, we are proud to present a selection of Nam June Paik's video art works in homage to him. Nam June Paik was born on 20th July 1932 in Seoul, South Korea and died on 29th January 2006 in Miami, Florida. He is considered one of the first video and media artists. In 1956 he came to West Germany to pursue studies in music. As a member of the Fluxus artists' movement, he began working with television sets as art objects. He was interested above all in the combination of innovative technology and artistic experimentation. From the beginning, the relationship between video and the mass medium of television played a central role in Paik's work. Input visitors have the opportunity to view some of Paik's most famous videos – including excerpts from the now-legendary New Year's Day 1984 satellite broadcast Good Morning Mr. Orwell and the controversial Living with the Living Theatre – on the Video Wall at the Palazzo dei Congressi Conference Centre. This material has been generously provided by the Locarno Video Art Festival archive of the Museo Cantonale d'Arte Lugano.

Out of Format – A Film by György

The quest for images and sounds can sometimes take unexpected paths. Like the case of Pálos György: the middle-aged Hungarian independent filmmaker, who rarely watches television, was in the middle of a film about a building in downtown Budapest when he got a call from an international television festival... The next day he was on the plane to Input 2006 in Taiwan, armed with his mini digital video camera. Out of Format is the result of György's voyage. It can be viewed on the Video Wall at the Palazzo dei Congressi.

Luciano Rigolini Retrospective

La forma dello sguardo (The Form of the Gaze) is the title of an exhibition at the Museo Cantonale d'Arte Lugano devoted to the work of Luciano Rigolini. The exhibition highlights different aspects of an exploration into the identity of photography through a constant dialogue with its own history and with twentieth-century art. Alongside photographs taken by the artist, the retrospective also includes a selection of television programmes commissioned by Luciano Rigolini for ARTE Television's La Lucarne strand: further examples of aesthetic practices related to the spirit of Input. Present your Input 2007 badge for free admission to the exhibition.

Who's Who International Board

At the very heart of Input is its International Board, made up of respected broadcasters from about a dozen countries who are elected for a term of four years. These are the people who provide the inspiration, organization, and continuity that enables Input to spring up reborn, year after year, in country after country. These are the people who watch over the health and growth of Input.

Who's Who

National Coordinators

National Coordinators are programme makers from around the globe who represent Input to their regional constituencies. Appointed by the International Board, each Coordinator represents his/her country by sending innovative, provocative and courageous programmes to the International Selection Committee which, in turn, selects what its members judge to be the best programmes for the upcoming Conference.

In order to qualify as a National Coordinator, Conference participation is mandatory. The person selected should be able to fairly represent both the independent producers' community and the public broadcaster of his/her country.

Who's Who Shop Stewards

Composed of television professionals from all corners of the world, the Shop Stewards are a unique group whose task it is to select the best programmes out of up to 400 entries and to arrange the Conference Screening Schedule. The Shop Stewards sort the selected programmes into diverse screening sessions and discussion themes which become the backbone of the Conference. The Shop Stewards group changes annually; however, a few of the Stewards stay on the following year, for continuity and to honour the philosophy of Input. This year they screened 278 programmes from 32 countries.

During the Conference, the Shop Stewards act as session presenters and moderate discussions between the programme presenters and the Conference delegates.

Pat van Heerden grew up on a cattle farm in the Northern Cape of South Africa. There she learned to walk quietly in the veldt. Instead of growing herbs she completed a BSocSci and a teaching degree at the University of Cape Town. She received a scholarship to New York University to study film and history, completed her MA in history and film, and is currently PhD (abd). In New York, she worked on countless New York University and Columbia University student films. She went on to co-direct A Woman's Place, screened on PBS stations across America, India and South Africa. She has taught history and film at New York University as well as the University of the Witwatersrand. In 2001 she made the opening film for the Apartheid Museum and worked on other museum installations. In 2003 she joined SABC as Commissioning Editor for Factual Programming and started to work on Project 10:13 – narrative-driven factual films, celebrating ten years of freedom. She then went on to head Entertainment for 3 channels. Currently she is at the Binger Film Lab in Amsterdam developing a feature about a great historical figure. She has planted herbs but they are not tended yet. And she hopes to watch her two boys walk in the veldt but does not expect it to be quiet.

I am told that from my infancy I always wanted to lead a quiet life, whatever that means. Then I found myself in a Catholic seminary purely by accident. My friends insist my wife is the proverbial Eve who successfully distracted me from a quiet and monastic life in the service of the Church. She disagrees of course, but who wouldn't? I insist God had other plans for me. From an initial dream of becoming a Jesuit priest, I found myself studying English Literature and Drama and Theatre Studies. That is how I drifted into television, where I have earned a living (and you know what that means in public television) for the past sixteen years. During this period, I have moved from dramaturgy to producing and directing drama, special events, and training. Currently I am a supervising producer in charge of programme development and new concepts. When I was much younger and could afford a hobby, I could be found in a dojo, wearing a kimono and doing Shotokan. With a wife and three growing boys each vying for my attention, you can understand why it's becoming increasingly difficult for me to find private and quiet times lately. I just completed an MA in Communication Studies and manage a small company called insitu, which specializes in television content development. If you want any further information, the two options you have are either being in my sessions or catching me in the shop stewards' room. I prefer the former.

When I was born, my elder brother was in an Israeli jail. When I was 10, my other two brothers were sent to jail. When I was 15, I too was imprisoned (for political reasons of course). In a country where politics includes the smallest details of people's lives, my love of film and television took me in the direction of filmmaking where I could observe, interfere, and tell the world about the details of our lives. I began my career as a film editor for several documentaries and fiction films, and then traveled to London where I gained my MA degree in documentary filmmaking. My graduation film won the Royal TV society award for best postgraduate documentary in the UK. After I came back to Palestine my brother and I founded Dar Films, a production company that has produced several documentaries and TV programmes. I have also produced children's TV shows with local networks. Although my passion is making films, I find a lot of pleasure teaching at Al-Quds University in the TV and media department, where I enjoy working with young students eager to change their world.

As far back as I can remember, I wanted to be a journalist. I figured I would meet interesting people, I would travel around the world, and life would be exciting, full of surprises and never boring. Thirty years later, I can say that all of my expectations have been met. In 1976, after six months of travelling in the Middle East, I was hired by the very serious Journal de Genève, where I started my journalistic career at the foreign desk – and stayed two years in Bangkok and Macao during the boat people crisis. When I came back to Geneva with my husband and two kids, a job was waiting for me at the Télévision Suisse Romande (TSR) and that's when I fell in love with television journalism. The shooting, the editing, the teamwork: nothing could beat that. Since then I have been working for news programmes, current affairs, and documentaries. I have anchored programmes, I have been head of magazines, and lately I found a new passion: I am exploring the world of formats, scouting for my colleagues and producing new ones for TSR every year.

Joan Carreras was born in Barcelona in 1962, a year in which a heavy snowstorm hit this Mediterranean city (totally unusual) and the summer was extremely hot (not so unusual). Perhaps he should have been born in a more ordinary year. But he's one of five siblings, and they couldn't all be born at the same time. Joan had to be the first, so he was born during that extreme summer of July 1962. He soon decided he wanted to write books. When a TV made its way into the household, he became a cartoon freak and started toying with the idea of working in a strange place like television (did you have to dress in color or in black and white?). Today he works for TV3, the Catalan public television network. He is the director of 33 (the cultural channel), K3 (the children's channel) and 300 (the fiction channel). In his six years at TV3 he has held different positions including Head of Programming and Head of Cultural Programmes. Before that he worked as a scriptwriter in television and radio, and a journalist for newspapers and magazines. He has published four books that earned good reviews but middling sales. In short, his life is close to what he dreamed it would be as a child. The rest he made up as he went along and he has no complaints. He is married with two children (13 and 8 years old) and lives with them in a house that is a five-minute walk from the beach.

1974, the year I was born, was also the year my home town Kolkata got to see television for the first time. Born into a family where television was the most talked-about topic, I decided while still in school to take it up as my career. News always attracted me, and during my studies in Political Science I became a correspondent for youth news at Doordarshan, the Indian national television. Having completed a Master's in International Relations, I joined WTN and later CNN as the East India correspondent. The urge to be independent compelled me to join my family's business in television in the year 2000. Apart from running a 24-hour local bangla television channel and an electronic NGO, my company, Sukriti, also handles live sports coverage for ESPN, and the documentaries for the only public service broadcasting trust in India. Sports, education, health and news are my primary focus areas. I have worked as a freelancer for broadcasters such as Star Plus, BBC, DD sports, Channel 9 (Australia), RT1 (Italy). Apart from television, as a national oarsperson I've represented my country in several international regattas. I'm not a gifted musician, but music and musical programmes remain among my favourites.

When he is not attending Input, William Gilcher is a writer-producer. He divides his time between independent TV and film projects and the Goethe Institut/German Cultural Center, where he is director of media projects for North America. In Washington, he and his co-conspirators have organized several "Best of Input" programmes. At the University of Iowa, he wrote about the unknown American films of Jean Renoir. He was director of the Cornell University Cinema, and the American co-producer of George Rouquier's Biquefarre, a classic film about French rural life, which won prizes at the Venice Film Festival and elsewhere. After several years at the Media Programme of the National Endowment for the Humanities, Bill joined the staff of the University of Maryland, where he produced a film version of Beckett's Endgame, recreating Beckett's own staging with the San Quentin Drama Workshop. For the Goethe-Institut, Bill has specialized in TV, radio and internet projects about cultural issues in the European-American (non-)dialogue. His current projects include a performance-based video about poet Hilda Stern Cohen and a web-based project about Brazilian cinema. He is also co-president of the Association Georges Rouquier in Goutrens (Aveyron), France.

Graeme Isaac has worked as a writer, producer, script editor, and music producer of both documentaries and dramas. He is a jack of all trades and a master of none, which is probably why he ended up working mainly as a producer. His first film, the feature road movie Wrong Side of the Road, was the first Australian feature film with an all-Aboriginal cast. Since then he has produced both television documentaries and feature dramas, a number of which have been made with Aboriginal communities and with Aboriginal filmmakers. His recent documentary Dhakiyarr vs. the King was a finalist in the World Docs competition at Sundance. He has also worked as a creative and production consultant on three Indonesian feature films, two of which (Tjoet Nja Dhein and Daun Di Atas Bantal) premiered at Cannes. He recently worked as consultant on the Indonesian feature documentary Serambi, which premiere at Cannes in 2006. In previous lives he was a member of the Australian Performing Group (Pram Factory), a founding member of Circus Oz, and played with the band Captain Matchbox.

For the first four years of her life, Vivi's world was a walled garden in the north of Tehran which she shared with two Alsations, the stray cats they used to chase and a tortoise called Oscar. Then Vivi moved to London, where she grew up and got a job at the BBC. Suddenly all those years of dreaming in the garden matured into a love of storytelling and making documentaries. So, she made films for the science series Horizon about living forever, snowball Earth and the lost pyramids of Caral. After that, it was off to the current affairs department, where she thought up ideas for people like Gore Vidal, Norman Mailer and Kenneth Kaunda to come and have conversations. In between, she made documentaries about obese kids and teenagers with STDs and learned a lot about gaining people's trust and telling their stories sensitively. Always a fan of variety, the next few years were a mix of drama in Moscow for a film about Ivan the Terrible, following the trail of an art thief from Alsace, poking around in a tomb in the Valley of the Kings and other bits and bobs. Now, she's developing two films which are close to her heart and take her back to her half-Iranian, half-Swedish roots: Persian Carpet, a film about Vivi's feisty female cousin who lives in Iran and Building Bridges, a film about her Swedish architect grandfather who built lots of amazing things in Iran.

Kethiwe Ngcobo, the current driving force behind SABC Content Hub Drama Department, grew up in the streets of London. After Cultural Studies at Portsmouth University, she went on to become an apprentice film editor for two years on the Joint Board For Film Industry Training (JOBFIT) and garnered credits for such blockbusters as Aliens III, Nuns On The Run and Jim Henson's Greek Myths. Feeding her passion for story, she became an assistant film editor on various TV serials and specials. A major plot point in Kethi's story was her return to South Africa for a six-month holiday that never ended. On arrival in South Africa she knew that she was back home and home it has been ever since. Second to this life-changing decision, her greatest period of transformation came during her years as a independent freelance producer, as well as during the eight years she ran her own production company, Fuzebox. This journey through the world of story has taken Kethi through many turning points, climaxing in her being head-hunted as the inaugural Head of Drama at the South Africa Broadcasting Corporation (SABC). Kethi's work is far from done as she continues to forge change in the way that drama content is developed and presented in her homeland. A sub-plot to Kethi's journey in story is the ever-present, beaming smile of her amazing six-year-old son who now adds more fuel to the fire that drives this force of drama.

One November Monday Lidia was born. Her mother thought gladly “It won’t be a thorn.” Lidia ignored crazy boys hooking, rather focused on books on good looking. Also about wise girls and brave men she read, really wanting to fight down the bad. Being a sister of a naughty Mike, Lidia decided she wouldn’t be a spike. Working hard, doing her best, being 15 forgot what’s the rest. Went to the radio, volunteered there, just to say “hi” to everyone around her. Attending school was boring for Lidia. She preferred to dance, sing or just work for the media. Leaving her boyfriend could be a breakdown, so she really wanted to stay in her hometown. Craved for knowing and learning more. Linguistics and history would never be a bore. Soon got engaged, wanted to move, but stayed only few months, did not feel the groove. Moved to the East, where grandmother died, worked in TV when winter was white. First had to learn what camera is and how to work with minimal risk. It was in Lublin, the city of kindly men, soon felt a bit lonely, moved once again. Came back to Opole; TV boss called Lidia, checked her knowledge with encyclopedia. The boss once agreed on Rozkminka filming, Lidia’s own programme for young people thinking. Then came an award for her creative job. She said “Stop, I don’t want to be mobbed.” Her weather forecast, not being highest ambition, turned into fun, caused recognition. Let it be it, she’d never be let down, now even likes banquets and wearing a gown.

I started out in the Oslo punk scene in the 1980s. From playing in a hardcore band I went on to make music videos and documentaries for TV. The subjects were often youth-related, like music and the housing situation for young people in Oslo. I also did a lot of live sport productions, working on camera, directing and editing. In 1990 I started in the youth department at NRK, Norway’s public broadcaster. Since then I have done nearly everything possible in TV production including camera, editing, researching, hosting and acting. In the mid-1990s I sort of drifted into humour for a while, until I had a lovely year off in Australia with my family. After that, I worked for various TV stations as an independent before I ended up back at NRK doing daily afternoon programmes for children. Now I’m working as an executive producer in the cultural department of NRK, without any traces of my punk past, but still with my homemade tattoos, and the feeling that I don’t know what more to fill in here to hide the fact that I’m without a formal education. But does it matter? It’s only TV!

Jouko started to work as a journalist right after school about twenty-five years ago, as he didn't know what he liked to do, or could do. For ten years he worked for newspapers, writing, photographing, making layouts, and also collected some radio experience. He got fed up with everything and backpacked around the world for one and half years, returned to Finland, and went straight from the Trans-Siberian train to a First of May party, where he was recruited at 5 am to YLE TV1 Current Affairs. After ten years of being there as a reporter and presenter, he moved to culture programmes, where he still works, the last four years as a producer. At the moment he produces – among other things – a weekly 50-minute live culture programme and weekly 15-minute reportage. Jouko has two kids, one almost 2 and one almost 16 years old. There is also a dog in the family, although Jouko still doesn't know exactly why. Lugano will be Jouko's 10th Input, so it will be a jubilee year. During this Input week his big wooden boat is waiting for him to come back and finish the spring maintenance, as the sea might be free of ice already – or maybe not.

After I finished my psychology studies and gave birth to my first child (this was in 1974), I stumbled into my first freelance job for public broadcasting. From then on I did various radio programmes for different broadcasters. Even though I loved radio, I found the challenge of making documentaries for television impossible to resist and was lucky enough to get the chance to do it. Then, ten years ago, I was asked to fill the position of programme director of the RVU, a small but quite ambitious educational (for adults) public broadcaster. After a few years I found out that management was not the place for me. I went back to documentaries, and did scriptwriting at our world-famous Binger Institute. The television film Rough Times won the award for best television drama two years ago, and I was proud to have written the script for it. At the moment I feel as if the beginning of my career has started again: I was rewarded with an early pension a few months ago (like most Dutch programme-makers over 55). For me it signifies Possibilities! Chances! Freedom in the air!

Who's Who

Input 2007 Hosts: SRG SSR idée suisse and RTSI

Input 2007 is organized and financed by the Swiss Broadcasting Corporation SRG SSR idée suisse and by the Italian language broadcaster RTSI, with further contributions from various sponsors.

Input 2007 Hosts: SRG SSR idée suisse and RTSI

SRG SSR idée suisse

Switzerland's public service broadcaster is charged with producing and broadcasting radio and television programmes of equal quality in each of the country's four official languages, to promote reciprocal understanding, cohesion and exchange between regions as well as between cultural and linguistic communities.

SRG SSR is the main Swiss company in the electronic media sector, with some 6,000 employees. The SRG SSR bouquet is national, multimedia and multilingual. It comprises seven television broadcasters and 16 radio networks in the four national languages (German, French, Italian and Romansh), as well as websites in ten languages, and teletext services in Italian, German and French.

SRG SSR's various channels provide news bulletins, special services and programmes dedicated to politics, culture, society and sport. Entertainment – in the form of films, sitcoms, radio dramas, shows and talk shows – is particularly important. SRG SSR's channels can be received throughout the country.

SRG SSR is a non-profit enterprise. Most of SRG SSR's income is provided by licence fees, followed in importance by sponsorship and advertising revenues and other commercial income.

RTSI

Radiotelevisione svizzera di lingua italiana RTSI is one of SRG SSR idée suisse's seven Enterprise Units. Located in Lugano, it is responsible for radio and television broadcasting aimed at Switzerland's Italian-speaking population.

It has three radio stations, two television channels and a website. Its headquarters are in Lugano. Sensitive to the challenges faced by Italian-speaking Switzerland as well as the needs of Italian speakers beyond its borders and the realities of northern Italy, RTSI highlights the contribution of Italian language and culture to the construction of a Swiss identity and the reinforcement of national cohesion.

With a broad range of content, RTSI's programmes satisfy the varied demands of the audience, ranging from information to entertainment, from culture to sport. RTSI is a small company with its roots in federalism and respect for minorities.

Funding Bodies

A conference like Input could not take place without volunteer work and solidarity from dedicated supporters of high-quality public television, and from organizations and institutions whose contributions to travel costs enable many of our delegates to attend the event. We would like to acknowledge generous contributions from:

Canal France International (www.cfi.fr)

provides travel grants for delegates from francophone African countries.

Consejo Nacional para la Cultura y las Artes (Arenal, 32, Mexico, D.F.)

Secretaría de Relaciones Exteriores.

Corporation for Public Broadcasting (www.cpb.org)

provides annual travel assistance for US Input programme representatives and awards Professional Development Fellowships to public television programme producers throughout the United States to attend Input conferences.

South Carolina ETV (www.myetv.org/input) has served as the US Input Secretariat on a voluntary basis since 1984, providing staff support and resources to manage travel grants and host the annual US Input pre-selection. Our goal is to foster awareness and growth of Input in the US and to extend the benefits to public television professionals system wide.

Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation (www.eda.admin.ch) provides travel grants for Input delegates from francophone African countries, Armenia, Georgia, Kyrgyzstan, Palestine.

Media, Art and TV in Interaction

Monday 7th, 09:00–13:00 Red Room

TV on Trial

Session Leader Jo Raknes

TV ignores the right to privacy as it makes its way into the courthouse and, even further, into the files of the prisoners applying for parole. Then it acts as jury, as it openly points out the guilty and goes in for the hunt. We want to put the public broadcaster on trial to see whether we are violators of privacy or defenders of the public interest, all in the name of justice.

Guilty or Not Guilty / The Nayadet Case

45' / Chile / Documentary - Factual

Director Rodrigo Ivan Sepulveda

Presenters Rodrigo Ivan Sepulveda, Rony Goldschmied

Shop Steward Graeme Isaac

Is this the first televised trial ever? In Chile it was a first. Nayadet is accused of drug trafficking. This documentary follows her, not only in her life before the trial, but all the way into the courthouse. The district attorneys, defenders, victims and accused all give their version of the story before the camera enters the courtroom and reveals what happens in a court case, all the way to the verdict.

Lock 'em Up Or Let 'em Out

59' / United Kingdom / Documentary - Factual

Director Simon Ford

Presenter Louise Shorter

Shop Steward Rupsha Dasgupta

Punishment for a crime is a must. But who decides when the punishment has lasted long enough? And how? Can the camera be a member of the parole board responsible for such a crucial, confidential decision?

The Boys Who Killed Stephen Lawrence

60' / United Kingdom / Documentary - Factual

Director / Presenter Neil Grant

Shop Steward Jo Raknes

We are used to seeing factual programmes that reopen a case to free the innocent. This time a reporter goes undercover for 12 months to prove that 5 people are guilty of killing a young boy in London, despite the fact that they were found not guilty by the court. BBC reporter Mark Daley uncovers new witnesses and testimony in the killing of Stephen Lawrence, and presents tape recordings taken from internal police interrogations and surveillance.

Monday 7th, 09:00–13:00 Blue RoomIn-Your-Face TV: Satire, Irony, and the Deadly Serious*Session Leader William Gilcher

Sometimes the best way to deal with heavy topics is a light touch of a sharp knife, followed by a quick twist in the wound and a little salt. And sometimes a good way to deal with a light topic is with a heavy touch. Three wildly different programmes that entertain, startle, and leave us either laughing, outraged, or maybe out of a job.

Our Secret Archives

10' / Switzerland / Fiction - Series

Director / Presenter Noel TortajadaShop Steward William Gilcher

More secrets from the vaults! How does the Federal Commission for the Rehabilitation of Switzerland's Heroic Heritage do its vital work? What else is hidden away from the citizenry? And how did Swiss TV deal with the scandal over the revelations?

Kalinovski Square

87' / Belarus / Documentary - Current Affairs

Director / Presenter Yury KhashchavatskiShop Steward William Gilcher

A startlingly fresh look at the presidential elections in Belarus by a dissident filmmaker with a strong, personal point of view. In this hilarious, entertaining, yet hard-hitting feature doc, Yuri Khashevatsky pokes fun at the powerful by telling his version of the truth. Would you dare do this in your country?

Bye Bye Belgium

95' / Belgium / Fiction - TV Movie

Director / Presenter Philippe DutilleulShop Steward Karen Michael

On the weekly news special: The Flemish Parliament has voted to secede from Belgium, the King has left for the Congo. This mockumentary raises all the questions that Belgium's Flemish-speaking and French-speaking communities didn't dare face. Huge audiences and high ratings – but there was trouble for the head of RTBF Channel after this “news” program was aired. Are fake reality and irony the latest tools public TV can use to deal with urgent national issues? How far can it go? What is the broadcaster's responsibility?

Monday 7th, 09:00–13:00 Green RoomRecreating History: Where are the boundaries between fact and fiction?*Session Leader Kethiwe Ngcobo

How meaningful is the past to our present audience, and what are the devices we use to sustain viewer interest? Is drama documentary the right device? How far do we go in fictionalizing history? How do we deliver programming that is complex and shows the ambiguities of history? How do we rationalize the cost of recreating the past? What are the responsibilities of producing history for television? Big questions with two great programmes.

Dresden

90' / Germany / Fiction - TV Movie

Director Roland Suso RichterPresenter Sascha SchwingelShop Steward Béatrice Barton

Dresden, January 1945, its baroque splendours still undisturbed by the war. Only hours later, the Allies launch a devastating bomb attack that destroys the whole inner city. Deluxe production values, a romanticized past, a riveting story: altogether a simple recipe for success.

The Plot Against Harold Wilson

90' / United Kingdom / Documentary - Docu-Drama

Director / Presenter Simon FordShop Steward Kethiwe Ngcobo

Labour Prime Minister Harold Wilson resigned, seemingly suddenly. His reasons for doing so were not released at the time. This documentary explores his belief that he was the target of a plan to stage a military coup against his government. With echoes of Watergate, the documentary is based on previously unreleased tapes recorded with him soon after his resignation.

Monday 7th, 14:30–18:30 Red RoomWar: Behind the Lines*Session Leader Rupsha Dasgupta

War is a shocking reality! TV is a strident medium to tell this story. But how should we tell the terrible stories that have to be told, without chasing audiences away in disgust and into ignorance and apathy?

Woman see lot of things

65' / France / Documentary - Factual

Director / Presenter Meira Asher

Shop Steward Jo Raknes

Anita Jackson, Mahade Pako and Chris Conteh share their horrible memories of rape, torture and killing, by acting out scenes from their past as female combatants in the wars in Sierra Leone and Liberia. These performances are combined with animated illustrations. The cartoon images of the young women contradict their testimony: does this element make their stories easier to consume, for an audience not ready to face evidence of such cruelty?

Little Terrorist

15' / India / Documentary - Docu-Drama

Director / Presenter Ashvin Kumar

Shop Steward Joan Carreras

A Pakistani Muslim boy accidentally crosses the land-mined border and reaches a small village where the only helper is an orthodox Hindu. Is it possible to approach a serious conflict like the one between Pakistan and India with a short personal story? A political parable which is also a moving reflection on the prejudices that cause wars.

Qana

33' / Iran / Documentary - Docu-Drama

Director / Presenter Mohammad Reza Abbasian

Shop Steward Lupita Miranda

An Iranian filmmaker revisits the location of this mass murder captured on camera eight years earlier, and tells its story. Are we allowed to show such footage on TV? Does the filmmaker consider this to be a protest against the horror of war? Or is it a political statement?

The Last Dog in Rwanda

29' / Sweden / Fiction - TV Movie

Director / Presenter Jens Assur

Shop Steward Rupsha Dasgupta

We have all heard of dogs used in the military, but what about dogs in the civil war in Rwanda? A fascinating short fiction depicting the horror in Rwanda through the life of a photographer and – yes – dogs.

Monday 7th, 14:30–18:30 Blue RoomNew Media Platforms and Public Television*Session Leader Michel F. Gélinas

The push is on. We all feel it in our personal as well as professional lives. One cannot just ignore it: the “New Media” are hot, the talk of the town, and maybe your deepest fear! The private sector’s realm? Or public broadcasting’s business? The debate is open and complex, and it keeps evolving. New players have entered the game. Who are they? What’s available out there? What is being done in and outside public television systems with those “New Media”? From cellphone productions to larger geographical territories accessible through new technologies; from using the internet as an added value for existing productions and institutions, to developing it as a broadcaster’s living policy; from Asia to Europe to America: professionals – from both the private and the public sector – want to show where they stand, what they do, what they are aiming at. Dynamics are at work in our television world. Some new kids on the block are moving in and they are good at it, while public television decision-makers have some critical choices to make. Input wants to be the window for you – the programme makers, the creative minds of public broadcasting – to inform you about different aspects of production, what’s developing, what may become your new way of working and who might become your competitor or your partner. Even better, and rare: a look at where your colleagues from other parts of the public television world are at. With examples from France, the United States, South Korea, Switzerland, India, Canada, Italy, Netherlands and more, there are new dynamics at work. Meet, discover, compare!

Public Service Broadcasters and New Media: Strategies and Financing

Monday 7th, 14:30–18:30 Green RoomCrossing Borders*Session Leader Graeme Isaac

In our increasingly multicultural world, we seem to be busier than ever pulling down walls that divide us, but at the same time building up new ones. How do public broadcasters deal with these increasingly contentious questions of national and cultural sovereignty?

To The Other Side

66' / Mexico / Documentary - Docu-Drama

Director / Presenter Natalia Almada

Shop Steward Graeme Isaac

With a fresh and inventive visual style, this programme uses the Corrido, a traditional Mexican song form that recounts current events and situations, to explore issues of Mexican-US migration and drug trafficking. The program works on many levels: personal, sociological, and musical.

The Border

20' / Kyrgyzstan / Fiction - TV Movie

Director Marat Alykulov

Presenter Altynai Koichumanova

Shop Steward Claudia Schreiner

Somewhere in the vast landscape of Central Asia a group of people try to cross a border between two countries, established after the fall of the Soviet Union. This drama carries a clear message about the artificiality of borders. Told with a very simple storyline accompanied by the use of metaphors, it touches your heart and takes a firm point of view. You can not divide people who share ethnic and cultural identity by deliberately setting up borders between them.

American Made

25' / United States / Fiction - TV Movie

Director / Presenter Sharat Raju

Shop Steward Kwame Akuffo-Anoff

An American drama about a Sikh family whose car breaks down in the middle of the desert. Who will stop to help them? Quiz: What do these three words have in common: “terrorist,” “fundamentalist” and “suicide bomber”? Answer: The person who uses them is prejudiced. But wait: before you see this film, take a close look at the person sitting next to you – just to remind yourself that someone might be judging you too!

Rage

90' / Germany / Fiction - TV Movie

Director Züli Aladag

Presenter Christian Granderath

Shop Steward Kethiwe Ngcobo

Simon Laub is a literature professor and a left-wing pacifist. His comfortable middle-class life is shaken when his teenage son Felix reluctantly admits to being bullied by Can, a young second-generation Turk. As Simon tries to solve his son's problems he enters into a world of violent racial conflict he had never faced within his own society. He tries reasoning with Can but they end up in a deadly spiral. Were they living in the same Germany? And who is the victim?

Tuesday 8th, 09:00–13:00 Red RoomLight*Session Leader Saed Andoni

It is hard to attract an audience to heavy subjects. Can “light” styles of making programmes shed light on serious issues? Is it a good idea to use a humorous approach to current affairs, business relationships, visions of society, and even suicide bombings, in order to get these topics discussed by a wide public?

The Chaser's War on Everything

26' / Australia / TV - Entertainment

Director Mark Fitzgerald

Shop Steward / Presenter Jo Raknes

Successful sketch-style comedy programme which deals with news and current events week by week in a fresh and funny style. The number of hits and downloads at YouTube shows that this programme is a hit among younger audiences in Australia and elsewhere.

NEO - Office Chuckles

29' / Japan / TV - Entertainment

Director / Presenter Teruyuki Yoshida

Shop Steward William Gilcher

How do you mix serious segments into a comedy-format show? See how a satirical sketch on Japanese hierarchies matches with a segment starring the President and CEO of Nissan Motors.

A Strange Place

25' / Spain / Documentary - Docu-Drama

Director / Presenter Fulvia Nicolas

Shop Steward Saed Andoni

A surprising portrait of Catalonia and the Catalans, and an uncommon way to look at one's own society and country: through the eyes of immigrants. Does this blend of good fun, curiosity and criticism win over the audience? It is definitely a strange place!

Trapped on the Road

20' / China / TV - Entertainment

Director Zhou Wen

Presenter Huo Wen

Shop Steward Carvin Eison

Humour and hidden camera techniques come together in this modern Chinese reality show. This episode explores how people react when they come across a stranded motorist whose car has fallen into an uncovered manhole. Some of the broader issues include hidden camera surveillance and social engineering.

Promised Paradise

52' / Netherlands / Documentary - Factual

Director / Presenter Leonard Retel Helmrich

Shop Steward Graeme Isaac

It is often the clown who makes the most profound comments on the human condition. Here an Indonesian poet and puppeteer sets out on a mission to find out why there are people in his country blowing themselves up, and to see if jihadist martyrs really do get to heaven.

Tuesday 8th, 09:00–13:00 Blue Room

Responsibility... What?

Session Leader Pal Sipos

Can you imagine a worse title for a morning session?The delegates are still digesting their breakfasts and you turn up with this ridiculous idea: responsibility.*Who carries the burden? Do you know what you are going to talk about? Need a definition? Responsibility: [noun] a form of trustworthiness; the trait of being answerable to someone for something or being responsible for one's conduct. Example: "Public television holds a position of great responsibility in society."*Nuremberg: Nazis on Trial - Albert Speer

59' / United Kingdom / Documentary - Docu-Drama

Director Nigel PatersonPresenter John Farren*Shop Steward Claudia Schreiner

This carefully researched docudrama follows Speer's defence strategy and his inner battle with his own role in the Nazi state, to provide insights into the ambiguous personality of a man who many Allies saw as a "good Nazi," while others considered him a clever opportunist. With no hard evidence available to support either view, the film leaves the ultimate judgement to the viewer. But how does the emphasis on factual accuracy affect the programme's emotional and dramatic impact?

The Planet

52' / Sweden / Documentary - Factual

Directors Linus Torell, Michael Stenberg,Johan Söderberg*Presenter Linus Torell*Shop Steward Pal Sipos

Personally I am fed up with this "let's save the planet!" type of television programme. We all know that the different experts, and even all the television crews, are aware that the Earth is in danger. And then what? Does anything change? Do we protect our environment more effectively? Do we consume less? Well, give it one more try with this fast-paced, brilliant Swedish documentary. Maybe this time...?

Smiling in a Warzone

77' / Sweden / Documentary - Factual

Director Magnus BejmarPresenter Lars Säfström*Shop Steward Jetske Spanjer

Can you fly 6000 km in a beat-up old plane that needs fuel every 3 hours? Can you defy the American army, telling you to stop invading the skies of Afghanistan? What has got into your head? And why? In this incredible journey of a young female Danish pilot, you will be sitting next to her experiencing fear of flying and probably loving it.

Tuesday 8th, 09:00–13:00 Green Room

Frames of Art

Session Leader Lupita Miranda

Music, photography, dance, poetry, animation: why is it difficult to reach our audiences when it comes to promoting art? How can we improve our skills in delivering this message? Take a look at some different ways to make poetry, classical music or dance programmes appealing, engaging and accessible.

Girl in a Mirror

55' / Australia / Documentary - Performing Arts

Director Kathy DraytonPresenter Helen Bowden*Shop Steward Lidia Piechota

How to portray an artist and her controversial work, using attention to detail and a respectful approach? This biography of Australian photographer Carol Jerems show who she really was, without trivializing or exaggerated use of innovative techniques.

Classical Masterpieces – 1"An Alpine Symphony" by Richard Strauss

26' / Germany / Documentary - Performing Arts

Directors Oliver Becker, Ellen FellmannPresenter Rolf Rische*Shop Steward Joan Carreras

A great live performance in high definition with the Deutsches Symphonie Orchester Berlin. Along with remote-controlled cameras, zoom shots and rapid editing, the programme makers also intercut the music with interviews, quotations and – more astonishing – animation. Trivial? Or a successful attempt to introduce viewers to classical music?

Play

4' / Switzerland / Fiction - Animation

Director / Presenter Georges SchwizgebelShop Steward Kwame Akuffo-Anoff

If you are brooding over ways fresh ways to represent classical music, Play will excite you. It is a simple animation that plays with your mind. Never mind the cost. Just play along!

Terpsychora's Captives 2

52' / Russia / Documentary - Performing Arts

Director / Presenter Efim ReznikovShop Steward Lupita Miranda

Modern dance choreographer Bill T. Jones meets prima ballerina Natalia Balakhnicheva in Russia. Through the process of choreography they go on a journey into the deeper meaning of dance and the freedom of creation. This programme documents an inspiring encounter between two different cultures exchanging the inexplicable fire of art.

Blowing Words: Max Besora

15' / Spain / Documentary - Series

Directors Isabel Requena, Rubén García, Alba MontanerPresenter Alba Montaner*Shop Steward Lidia Piechota

Visualizing poetry in an extremely creative way is not a challenge. The real difficulty is making the poems understandable to those who aren't poetry lovers and don't like wasting their precious time checking out the hidden meaning of freaky pieces of art. Poetry doesn't have to make the audience yawn.

Tuesday 8th, 14:30–18:30 Red RoomPresenters' Trips*Session Leader Jouko Salokorpi

Four programmes and four trips: to visit chimpanzees, Norwegian families, cannibals, and an Ethiopian bush hospital. But who plays the main role? Is it a presenter's trip, or is the presenter just a storytelling device?

Chimps Are People Too

49' / United Kingdom / Documentary - Factual

Director / Presenter Dick Taylor

Shop Steward Saed Andoni

It seems to be a new trend to use hosts who are not really journalists or content experts to help audiences discover complicated subjects. In a "science for dummies" style, a comedian takes us on a scientific journey to find the similarities and differences between human beings and chimpanzees.

Koht with the Family

29' / Norway / Documentary - Docu-Soap

Director Kristin Ekker

Presenter Per Selstrom

Shop Steward Vivi Mellegard

Would you want a TV presenter sitting on your bed and filming you as you groan in pain, moments before giving birth? With humour and warmth, Kristin Koht gets up close and personal about what family life means to us today.

La Ruta

52' / Chile / TV - Cultural Magazine

Director / Presenter Ricardo Astorga

Shop Steward Jouko Salokorpi

A four-person crew travels deep into the almost unknown jungle in Papua New Guinea, to meet nothing less than the last cannibals in the world. The expedition doesn't lack sweat and strain, but whom do we finally meet: the crew, the cannibals, or both?

Nils and Ronny Without Borders -Getting to Know a Mass Murderer

45' / Norway / Documentary - Factual

Director / Presenter Ronny Kristoffersen

Shop Steward Jouko Salokorpi

Let's take a ride to a remote Doctors Without Borders hospital in Ethiopia with these two Norwegian guys. They make fun of themselves, and what happens? We have fun with them while watching a programme on lethal diseases like malaria, AIDS and kala azar. So it is with Nils and Ronny.

Tuesday 8th, 14:30–18:30 Blue RoomCitizen Journalism: A Challenge to Public Media*Session Leader Hugo Bigi

The basic idea behind citizen journalism or open-source journalism is that citizens without professional and standard journalism training can apply the tools of modern technology and use the global distribution of the internet to create media on their own and collaborate with others. We will raise and debate the question of how public broadcasters are coping with the worldwide growing phenomenon of open-source journalism, and focus on and screen examples of innovative approaches. Until now, open-source journalism models have mainly come from outside traditional media. Input 2007 invites a variety of independent open media producers and directors to screen their citizen-journalism projects and discuss their experiences, challenges and goals.

Your News

BBC News 24 has launched Your News: the first British all-user-generated news programme, featuring material sent to the BBC every day by its viewers and by readers of its website.

OhmyTV

OhmyTV is entirely based on user-generated content and run by the Korean citizen journalism website OhmyNews. It is considered one of the first net TVs in the world to publish contributions in an open-source style of news reporting. The number of participants is now said to be over 40,000. OhmyNews was influential in determining the outcome of the South Korean presidential election in December 2002.

Barcelona Televisió

Barcelona's local TV station runs a series of short news programmes in foreign languages, produced with the support of residents from 18 different countries. Nearly all productions are subtitled into Catalan and broadcast every other weekend.

theoneminutesjr.org

A non-commercial community without any set political belief or ideology, theoneminutesjr.org gives young people between 12 and 20 from around the world the opportunity to reach a broad audience. The one-minute videos are regularly broadcast on several European public TV channels.

B'Tselem

B'Tselem, the Israeli Information Center for Human Rights in the Occupied Territories, produces video testimonies and short videos addressing human rights causes. B'Tselem's footage has appeared regularly on prime time news programmes in Israel and around the world, as well as on internet news sites.

Center.tv

Launched in 2005, this German local TV station reaches over 750,000 households in the Cologne area. Center.tv runs a daily programme based on user-generated content, broadcast on cable as well as on the internet (live streams).

Citizen Journalism: A Debate

Tuesday 8th, 14:30–18:30 Green RoomTV as Therapy?*Session Leader Béatrice Barton

Can television function as therapy, as a healing process? Can it help people cope with a confused mind, a major illness or societal behaviour? Whether you enter the intimate world of psychotherapy or follow people with Tourette's syndrome, whether you learn a disturbing lesson in discrimination or deal with the second thoughts of an abuser, these programmes will shake up your habits as much through their craft as through their content.

In Treatment

30' / Israel / Fiction - Series

Director / Presenter Hagai LeviShop Steward Béatrice Barton

Have you ever been in analysis? What about following five patients through their weekly psychoanalytic sessions? Get a glimpse into the world of psychotherapy, and into Israeli society, thanks to Ruben the therapist and his patients, who range from a suicidal young gymnast to a grounded combat pilot. This revolutionary format will change your way of thinking programming and viewing habits.

A Lesson in Discrimination

45' / Canada / Documentary - Current Affairs

Director / Presenter Lucie PayeurShop Steward Karen Michael

A controversial and moving lesson in discrimination in a 3rd-grade Canadian classroom. Do children show discriminating behaviour at such an early age? Was this disturbing process too traumatizing for them? The point of the production is to demonstrate what discrimination is all about for children. But was the experiment meant only for children, or does it also work as a collective therapy?

Choice II

24' / South Africa / TV - Talk Show

Director / Presenter Ernie VoslooShop Steward Rupsha Dasgupta

What happens when you can't make a decision, or are doing something you know is wrong? It's simple: just turn to your friendly neighborhood TV programme for help. A friend in need.

But Still

80' / Germany / Documentary - Performing Arts

Directors Erwin Michelberger, Oleg TchernyPresenter Erwin MichelbergerShop Steward Lupita Miranda

A picnic in the forest becomes an intimate trip into the lives of six people with motor and vocal tics. Television about handicapped people often focuses on information, pity, and sensationalism. What does it take to build another kind of relationship with this kind of topic?

Wednesday 9th, 09:00–13:00 Red RoomHonest With/About the Youth*Session Leader Lidia Piechota

"Shake your booty and make me hot." Is this the way young people craving entertainment talk to each other? Who are these aggressive and supposedly brainless creatures, really? As the world becomes increasingly fast-paced, the reality of young people must be up-to-date too. They do need toughness, but they don't need to be treated like immature creatures interested in any colourful production with at least one swear word per minute.

Ode to Joy

37' / Poland / Fiction - TV Movie

Directors Anna Kazejak-Dawid, Jan Komasa,Maciej Migas*Presenter Anna Kazejak-DawidShop Steward Graeme Isaac

This is the second part of a trilogy by three young directors: three stories and three visions of contemporary Polish reality. We see young Poles from different walks of life struggling with their lack of prospects, with parents who don't understand them, and with their own dreams and aspirations.

Managing the Universe

1'20" / Ireland / Fiction - Animation

Director Jason TammemagiPresenter Gerard O'RourkeShop Steward Pal Sipos

Is it worth writing anything about a programme which is one minute long? While you read this, one third of it will be over. Though the episodes are very short, the issues they deal with are universal. Are there solutions to the eternal questions of adolescent life?

More Lipstick

15' / Finland / TV - Magazine

Director / Presenter Gert SabelShop Steward Vivi Mellegard

A teen magazine made up of skits acted out and presented by girls for girls aged 13–15. Using the language and humour of this age group, the show addresses the concerns they have: boyfriends, rivalry, physical appearance and hang-ups. How does it manage to reach its audience? Is the perspective so specific that no one but teenage girls can relate to the show?

Hip Hop: Beyond Beats and Rhymes

60' / United States / Documentary - Factual

Director / Presenter Byron HurtShop Steward Lidia Piechota

Direct slang, tough gangstas, no hesitation in acting aggressive: is that why hip hop culture is so attractive? Are there alternatives for young hip-hoppers to follow? Now the truth is revealed. Let us be aware about what it is that we admire so much.

Creating Success With Formats – Best from the Eurovision Creative Forum

This session is designed to watch and learn how public broadcasters around the world are creating and producing successful formats for broadcast. The creation and exploitation of successful TV formats is a global business. We are delighted to be showcasing the best formats from the Eurovision Creative Forum. This annual event run by the European Broadcasting Union, is an opportunity for public broadcasters to share and exchange formats among EBU members. In addition to European formats, we will screen and discuss several other commercial formats that have been successfully adapted for public broadcasters in North America. Join us to discover how to create success by producing formats.

Different Cultures, Different Dramas?

Session Leader Karen Michael, William Gilcher

Does globalization mean that soon there will be only one way to tell a story on TV? Five countries, five short dramas. But are there five different styles?

Room 13 (The Heart at Work)

23' / Canada / Fiction - Series

Directors Éric Tessier, Richard Angers

Presenter Geneviève Lavoie

Shop Steward William Gilcher

Lemmy Caution meets the St. Lawrence River. This episode about a hit man who wants to retire is part of a loose anthology: a concept that allowed the broadcaster to assign several different teams to produce a series of short-form dramas. How much continuity in the series is required to keep an audience engaged?
Could the programmes or the format travel beyond
Québec?

Hide and Seek

49' / Ireland / Fiction - Series

Director / Presenter Dearbhla Walsh

Shop Steward Karen Michael

A gripping Irish drama that explores specifically Irish family issues. The drama plays out in a four-part episodic structure. High production values and budget, strong acting and writing. Is there a specifically
Irish approach to the drama?

Parz: Duty of a Son

23' / Kyrgyzstan / Fiction - TV Movie

Director Temirbek Birnazarov

Presenters Temirbek Birnazarov, Sadyk Sher-Niyaz

Shop Steward Carvin Eison

The dramatic interpretation of a son's responsibility for his dying father. The production is visually compelling and told with deliberate, sustained and often symbolic imagery. Some critics would question the pace of the film and the general lack of dialogue or narration, however these are the issues that create tension when compared with modern Western sensibilities. How effective is this style of storytelling?

Tell Me What You Feel

24' / Mexico / Fiction - TV Movie

Director / Presenter Iria Gomez Concheiro

Shop Steward Claudia Schreiner

This is a very emotional drama about young love and despair, shot on a low budget with a small crew but a lot of passion. Is a big budget really necessary to produce a touching and successful piece of fiction?

Pit Bull

45' / Poland / Fiction - Series

Director / Presenter Patryk Vega

Shop Steward Kethiwe Ngcobo

An exploration of the lives and work of five Polish homicide division cops. Does this classic genre piece do anything new? Does the country context make a difference?

Wednesday 9th, 14:00–16:00 Red Room

Process or Product

Session Leader Pat van Heerden, Graeme Isaac

Which is more important when you are a public service broadcaster: the product, or the process of making the product? Are there programmes that illuminate more because of the way they are made? Do we always know how people make the things we see? And if we did, would it matter? Perhaps one learns more from making food than from eating it...

Longing

88' / Germany / Fiction - TV Movie

Director Valeska Grisebach

Presenter Claudia Tronnier

Shop Steward Pat van Heerden

Set in a small German town, this moody TV drama tells the story of an ordinary young man with good intentions caught in the web of an extramarital relationship. The story moves at a gentle pace with great depth and intimate observation, played out by real people in real locations. Was the documentary-like truthfulness of the drama created by the eye of the director? Or did it come from the process of the programme's production, where a real community participated in the making of its own drama?

Wednesday 9th, 14:00–16:00 Blue Room

About Fiction: A Success Story

Session Leader Michel F. Gélinas

Fiction represents a major element for all public television broadcasters, whether they produce, broadcast or simply buy it. Television fiction programmes try to combine all the ingredients broadcasters are looking for: entertainment in its broadest sense, national cultural values, national creative forces and - of course - revenues and ratings! Films made for television represent large investments in time, money and a wide range of creative talents. Among the major producers of this type of fiction, RAI Television, the Italian national broadcaster, has developed a cunning sense of production, using its best national talents. RAI produces high-end productions, thus reaching tremendous audiences at home, as well as an international market. How do they do it? Is there a secret formula for achieving such success? What sort of producers, directors, and writers are behind it? Is it a marketing and distribution process only? If so, how? Discover a real treat, a gift for your eyes, your ears, and your brains: a detective story that may change your mind about the genre. In this session about a national broadcaster's choice, meet some of the people behind it.

Panelists

Alberto Sironi director

Andrea Camilleri book author, in a taped interview

Detective Montalbano: Find the Lady

97' / Italy / Fiction - TV Movie

Director / Presenter Alberto Sironi

Shop Steward Michel F. Gélinas

RAI Television has produced fourteen telefilms adapted from crime author Andrea Camilleri's novels featuring Commissario Montalbano, which have been translated into over thirty languages. In this episode, detective Montalbano investigates the death of local construction magnate Girolamo Cascio and uncovers a trail of further crimes.

Thursday 10th, 09:30–13:30 Red Room

Help Yourself

Session Leader Joan Carreras

Sometimes public broadcasters act like social workers. Is it out of guilt? Attending this session, you will receive tips on safe sex, advice on the prevention of anorexia and other diseases, assistance in looking for a job, and guidelines to avoid fraud. But isn't there an ulterior motive behind these good intentions? This session features some extremely funny programmes.

Flags on Mars: God Bless Sex

26' / Colombia / Documentary - Series

Director Claudia Bermudez

Presenters Claudia Bermudez, Alexandra Reyes

Shop Steward William Gilcher

An unusually frank approach to sex education for public television in a Catholic country. This episode from an ongoing variety programme aimed at young audiences places emphasis on the importance of enduring relationships rather than on the mechanics of sex. Just come...

My Friend Ana

11' / Canada / Fiction - TV Movie

Director / Presenter Laura Turek

Shop Steward Lidia Piechota

Feeling imperfect makes her feel insecure; she tries her best to increase her self-esteem. This has nothing to do with reasonable behaviour and reliable friends; it leads to harmful misunderstandings and mental disorders, one of which is anorexia.

A Dirty Weekend in Hospital

59' / United Kingdom / Documentary - Series

Director Nick Betts

Presenter Stuart Cabb

Shop Steward Saed Andoni

Advocacy journalism and popular medicine are combined with concern for the presence of disease-causing viruses and bacteria in UK hospitals. The programme uses a host who is neither a journalist nor a medical expert, but takes the viewer on a journey of collective discovery about the issue. Don't be afraid of viruses in this room!

Job Wanted

30' / Germany / Documentary - Docu-Soap

Director / Presenter Katrin Rothe

Shop Steward Joan Carreras

Is it fair to entertain the audience with someone else's hopelessness? This docu-series chronicles the joys and pains of looking for a job. Is this public service or voyeurism, aiming at higher employment or higher ratings?

Sweepstake Scams

22' / Taiwan / Fiction - Sitcom

Director Jem Chen

Presenters Tom Tang, Yo Shin Teng

Shop Steward Kethiwe Ngcobo

This programme uses fiction to explain the risk of sweepstake scams. It uses satire and surprising visual means, engages the audience easily and avoids the trap of being didactic. It is very funny and effective.

Thursday 10th, 09:30–13:30 Blue Room

Pace on Earth

Session Leader Jouko Salokorpi

Welcome to three places on our planet: China, Ireland and the Siberian tundra. We are going to explore the rhythm of life and consumption, the increasing speed of exploitation of our world. That sounds like a serious topic, but don't worry. It's really about the rhythm in the programmes. Does speed make a difference? Fast and fun, slow and hypnotic, or just showing some reindeer?

In Search of the Pope's Children

52' / Ireland / Documentary - Factual

Director Sarah Share

Presenters Sarah Share, Ruán Magan

Shop Steward Karen Michael

Economics and the history of Ireland. An engaging presentation, and creative ways to transform heavy issues into amusing, fast-paced documentary. Is economics such a hard subject for a public broadcaster to handle that it has to be twisted into a speedy infotainment program to attract an audience?

Manufactured Landscapes

83' / Canada / Documentary - Factual

Director / Presenter Jennifer Baichwal

Shop Steward Jouko Salokorpi

A big and fast industrial revolution, documented with big and slow images taken by Canadian photographer Edward Burtynsky, known for his large-scale photographs of landscapes transformed – or ruined – by industry. If the beginning feels like five minutes without a cut, it is because that's what it is. And it feels good. But are TV viewers on their sofas ready to accept this pace?

Yaptik-Hasse

31' / Russia / Documentary - Factual

Director Edgar Bartenev

Presenter Vyacheslav Telnov

Shop Steward Pal Sipos

This programme is a broadcaster's worst nightmare. Why? 1. Because it is slow. 2. Because its heroes communicate without words. 3. Because it is about the everyday life of a people to whom nothing extreme happens. 4. Because it is really hard to find a slot for a programme like this in any station's schedule. So what's the big fuss about? Why don't we just skip it? Because it is really good. So come and meet the Nenets people!

Thursday 10th, 09:30–13:30 Green Room

Objective and Subjective Realities:
Personalizing the PastSession Leader Carvin Eison

What happens when a programme maker's personal interpretation and subjective point of view collide with historical fact? What effect can this collision have on the viewer's perception of the truth? Five very different works explore these and other interesting questions.

Souvenirs

75' / Israel / Documentary - Docu-Drama

Directors Shahar Cohen, Halil Efrat*Presenter Sharon Shamir*Shop Steward Jetske Spanjer

An engaging and humorous journey by a father and son in search of the father's untold past. Did the film-makers have any idea of what they were getting themselves into? How did making the film affect the family? Were there other stories that the father did not tell his sons?

Bare

11' / India / Documentary - Factual

Director / Presenter Santana Issar*Shop Steward Lupita Miranda

Home video footage combined with recent phone conversations illustrate the filmmaker's feelings about her alcoholic father. The first in a four-part low-budget series called Passing Conflicts, Bare is a solid piece that hit us with its simple and provocative way of facing the past in order to deal with the present.

One Minute To Midnight

13' / Australia / Fiction - Animation

Director / Presenter Steve French*Shop Steward Jetske Spanjer

This series of animated shorts presents vignettes from the lives of senior citizens with multicultural backgrounds. Many of the stories are joyful, some triumphant, others poignant. Are they educational, entertaining or both? Should they be used to creatively bridge programmes during the broadcast day?

Finnish Presidents

28' / Finland / Documentary - Docu-Drama

Director / Presenter Atro Lahtela*Shop Steward Claudia Schreiner

Part of a series portraying Finnish presidents in their most challenging moments, the programme creatively interweaves archival material and re-enactment. The dialogue and personal thoughts featured are free interpretations of what went on behind the scenes. Do we really get a true picture of what happened?

At the End of the Furrow

10' / Mexico / Documentary - Docu-Drama

Director / Presenter Miguel Salgado*Shop Steward Carvin Eison

This film commemorates a tragic event in recent Mexican history, welding staged scenes presented in black and white onto "real" footage of the event. The story is powerful and elegant in its simplicity and raises questions about enhancing history with drama, and about the credibility of archival material.

Thursday 10th, 14:30–18:30 Red Room

Access

Session Leader Rupsha Dasgupta

Access to success. This session questions the right to cross boundaries while covering a topic. Entering a factory without permission, planting a hidden camera in a private room, accessing the personal life of a family through the children, or focusing on one child's traumatic experiences: Can we really go to any lengths to make a programme a big success?

China Blue

53' / United States / Documentary - Current Affairs

Director / Presenter Micha Peled*Shop Steward Saed Andoni

An insider's view into the day-to-day life of Chinese factory workers. This intimate and revealing documentary could only be made with unlimited access to workers and production facilities. What risks and compromises did the filmmaker have to face?

Operation X - Tricked into Porn

40' / Denmark / Documentary - Factual

Directors Kasper Vilsmark, Kristian Laursen*Presenter Kasper Vilsmark*Shop Steward Graeme Isaac

A modeling agency is discovered by a TV journalist to be a front for a pornographer, who also works as a "safe chat" consultant warning teenagers about the dangers of the internet. The journalist follows the pornographer's activities from a distance, using surveillance techniques such as hidden cameras and a fake victim to entangle the pornographer in the web he has woven for his intended victim.

My Life As A Child: Distant Dads

40' / United Kingdom / Documentary - Factual

Director Dermot Caulfield*Presenter Nicola Gibson, Tracy Jeune*Shop Steward Rupsha Dasgupta

This programme is a kind of video diary, made for public viewing, of some children who live separated from their biological fathers. In front of and behind the camera, the kids discuss serious issues from their daily lives. But how do you gain access to children of that age? Are they old enough to understand what they are getting into?

Rosita

56' / Nicaragua / Documentary - Factual

Director Attie & Goldwater*Presenters Barbara Attie, Janet Goldwater*Shop Steward Vivi Mellegard

The shocking case of a child rape in Nicaragua is handled fairly in a story which is politically charged, causing a national furore about abortion and the Catholic Church. How does the filmmaker gain access to the key players while protecting the child? What gives the programme maker the right to tell a sensitive story whose repercussions will remain long after the film crew has left?

Thursday 10th, 14:30–18:30 Blue Room

Afrochords Major - Riffs in African TV Voices

Session Leader Monique Phoba, Sylvia Vollenhoven

African storytelling is unique... and TV is no different.

So of course public TV is developing at its own pace and with its own special style on the African continent.

From Cape to Cairo or from Dar to Dakar, regions and nations are constantly redefining their individual voices.

Nowhere is the relationship between filmmakers and the TV bosses an easy one. But there is a new phenomenon on the Continent: private TV is challenging the status quo. A new Continental identity is being forged, a new language being invented. This session explores some bold African alternatives to traditional TV. Come and meet the future of African audiovisual storytelling.

Panelists

Jean-Pierre Bekolo noted film director from Cameroon

Rehad Desai Chair of the South African Screen Federation

Jihan El-Tahri Secretary General of the Guild of African Filmmakers in the Diaspora

Tunde Kelani ace cinematographer/ director from Nigeria

Florence Yameogo award-winning filmmaker from Burkina Faso

Extracts & Episodes

Femmes battantes (Fighting Women)

A co-production between eight African countries, TSR and CIRTEF. We've chosen a 24-minute episode: The Go-between of Hope, a story from Burkina Faso about an elderly woman who tries to protect widows against humiliating customs.

Abeni

A unique collaboration between Yoruba speakers of Nigeria and Benin: the story of a difficult love affair between a Nigerian girl from a rich family and a young man from Benin whose parents were her family's servants.

When We Were Black

A coming-of-age story set against the backdrop of the June 1976 student uprisings in Soweto. South Africans are still struggling to capture the drama of their recent past. For young director Khalo Mathabane this film is very much about his own coming of age.

The Glow of White Women

A documentary that was part of a series called Black On White: black South African filmmakers – who often experienced life as “the other” – turn their lenses on white people and whiteness.

Les Saignantes (Bloodletting)

Maverick Cameroonian director Jean-Pierre Bekolo has acquired a reputation as an innovator in African film. This is a superbly photographed, edited and scored sci-fi-action-horror hybrid about two young femmes fatales who set out to rid a futuristic country of its corrupt and sexually obsessed, powerful men.

Thursday 10th, 14:30–18:30 Green Room

Archiving the Truth

Session Leader Kwame Akuffo-Anoff

Whose reality? Whose truth? As a filmmaker, is it possible to be passionate and still maintain a creative distance about a subject as profound and intense as religion or mass suicide? Your burden if you choose to travel this path is to constantly pose the question: Whose truth, whose reality, am I chronicling? The two films in this session provide some perspectives.

American Experience: Jonestown

90' / United States / Documentary - Factual

Director / Presenter Stanley Nelson

Shop Steward Kwame Akuffo-Anoff

What would drive a preacher to try to exercise messianic control over his congregation? This is not a film about psychoanalysis; it is a compelling narrative about what led to the death of over 900 members of the People's Temple in Guyana. Was it mass suicide or just plain murder?

The Battle of Chernobyl

94' / France / Documentary - Factual

Director / Presenter Thomas Johnson

Shop Steward Jo Raknes

In April 1986 the fourth reactor at the Chernobyl nuclear power station exploded. For 8 months soldiers, miners and civilians worked around the clock to stop the spread of the radiation. Meanwhile, the truth about the lethal danger that threatened Northern Europe was suppressed. 3D images and archival footage that sparkles from radioactive exposure underline the deadly threat.

Friday 11th, 09:00–13:00 Red Room

Mind the Gap

Session Leader Pat van Heerden

Wikipedia is a different kind of encyclopaedia, where all netizens can add and edit definitions. Because all can participate, we can see evidence of the experiential gap between generations and cultures. TV also tries to close the gap between the programmes we produce for one platform and the many platforms that exist. How do we mind the gaps? Gap [noun]: 1. US-based fashion chain, named for the generation gap. 2. Gap: a synonym for any hole or opening, a chasm. 3. Gamer Advisory Panel, created by Sony Computer America. 4. Great Ape Project, aims to give all the rights and protections enjoyed by humans to every member of the great ape family.

Real Online

77' / Taiwan / Fiction - TV Movie

Director / Presenter John Hsu

Shop Steward Pat van Heerden

A fiction film in which the protagonists live between an online game called “Real Online” and the “Real World.” The two worlds collide as our characters experience real emotion in the gaming world, which they then seamlessly transfer to the real world. A bit like our world?

Mothern

23' / Brazil / TV - Entertainment

Director Luca Paiva

Presenter Gil Ribeiro

Shop Steward Jo Raknes

This raw, straightforward series about four women who discover the real meaning of motherhood the hard way became a huge hit in Brazil. The inspiration came from a blog that speaks candidly about motherhood. This multi-platform synergy has given the series a witty and seemingly authentic tone. A hybrid of drama and docu-soap, Mothern is real tribute to its title and narrows the platform gap between blogs and television.

Cosmic Connexion

68' / France / TV - Entertainment

Directors Anne Jaffrennou, Marie Cuisset

How to address a spoiled audience grown lazy and cynical through all it has been fed? Will children need a different approach, and is the result condescending or uplifting? Your opinion counts and will make a difference.

Each week a Belgian city is given a major task: earning stars while completing apparently very silly tasks. Through this easy process, broadcasters achieve two goals: they have thousands of contestants in a popular game show and are guaranteed high ratings. Most of the tasks involve national clichés. An opportunity for cultural exchange, or merely caricature? Would you find it funny if your country were parodied? Come and play and debate – and by the way, can you sing the Scottish national anthem?

Get Personal: Big voices in small worlds meet small windows on the big world

Session Leader Vivi Mellegard

What is it about a personal story that compels an audience to keep watching? How do these programmes take the viewer into the world of the main protagonist or narrator? We kick off with a big character, James Ellroy, who leads us into a murky underworld we find fascinating but depraved. The tone becomes more lyrical and charming in a film about Finnish economics. We go out strong with the emotional and feisty Shadya, whose story offers us a glimpse into the world of Arab Israelis.

Fans of Ellroy's books are in for a treat: a journey into the dark, ugly world of his obsession with murder, sex and violence. The film echoes the thriller style of Ellroy's novels as he becomes the detective in a very personal murder mystery: who killed his mother? How does the programme's candid approach grip the audience and make us care about Ellroy's quest to understand himself?

An informative economics show in the guise of a personal exploration, by the subject/filmmaker, into the evolution of both her own and Finnish society's attitudes toward money over the past fifty years. There is a monster sitting in front of the television, hungry to be entertained, eager to be satisfied. What are we willing to do to feed this hungry monster, the audience? How far are we willing to push the limits of good taste, decency and humanity in order to achieve market shares? Are we the monster creating the appetite for voyeuristic pleasures? Should we instead be taking on the responsibility of saving the audience from its dark desires? Does the audience want to be saved?

This series enters the taboo zone of portraying ill and dying young people. Despite the participants' vulnerabilities, the programme treats them with respect while showing their desire to live and have fun. Using the docusoap format for such an intense topic seems to be a contradiction: how to keep a respectful distance while trying to satisfy the voyeuristic expectations of the audience? Will the entertaining format help attract a larger audience for such an important subject?

Mischief was an innovative and wildy ambitious series tackling topical and often serious issues by using humour combined with solid journalism. In A Dirty Weekend in Hospital – a film about MRSA – the big idea was to take 100 victims of the superbug and arrive en masse at 10 of the dirtiest hospitals with the worst MRSA records and start cleaning them up, unannounced and without permission. The challenge was to make a documentary that could be funny and hugely moving and respectful, while giving the audience an enticing proposition to watch rather than the usual worthy but often dull fare we see in most current affairs strands. The film created headlines in all the UK newspapers and caused a major uproar in the NHS at the highest levels. It won the Banff television festival and garnered numerous other awards and nominations.

A Strange Place is an ironic, at times critical, and fun portrait of Catalonia and the Catalans by those who know them only too well. One and a half million pairs of foreign eyes are on the Catalans around the clock. They belong to immigrants who have settled in Catalonia over the last few years. After all, they need to learn about their new country's little foibles. The temptation of asking them what they found out proved irresistible. A Strange Place is a bit like a survival guide. In the series, 60 newcomers describe the natives and their odd customs, and what it takes to live with them. The newcomers speak their minds, talking about the Catalan idiosyncrasies that they find engaging, amusing, infuriating, or just plain weird. All in all, it's a wonderful opportunity to see oneself through the eyes of others.

On 17 November 1978, Congressman Leo Ryan traveled to an isolated rain forest in Guyana to investigate the concerns of his San Francisco-area constituents. Their alarming stories focused on a jungle compound known as Jonestown, a group called the People's Temple, and its leader, Rev. Jim Jones. According to news filtering back to America, U.S. citizens were being held against their will in prison-camp conditions. There were allegations of physical and sexual abuse and even rumors of a planned mass suicide. Congressman Ryan, an impassioned human rights advocate, decided to get the facts for himself. Within 48 hours, Ryan, Jones, and over 900 Jonestown settlers were dead: casualties of the largest mass murder-suicide in history. American Experience goes beyond the salacious headlines to provide a revealing portrait of Jones, his followers, and the times that produced the calamity in the Guyanese jungle.

On 28 June 1995 in Aguas Blancas village, Guerrero, Mexico, 45 countrymen were traveling in a truck which was attacked by state police. 15 men were killed and 22 were wounded. This case, like so many in Mexico, remained unknown until a police video of the ambush came out a year later and led to an investigation. The people responsible were never found; the case was closed. In 2005 I was writing the script for my first film-school film when I realized that the tenth anniversary of Aguas Blancas was hardly mentioned in the news. I remembered the video I had seen 9 years ago. My script took shape by reading the survivors' testimonies, and putting them together. Testimony and anecdote became dialogue and action. The shock these images caused me when I saw them again was so strong, I felt it was necessary to do something: to show the reality from a survivor's point of view, and in this way, to create a living memory of the event.

Danny Wallace is on a mission to convince the world that chimps are people too. He believes the time has come to make our hairy relatives part of the family. Our primate brethren share 99.4% of our DNA and are more closely related to us than they are to gorillas. So shouldn't they be granted the same rights as people? Armed with the latest scientific evidence, Danny travels the globe to quiz primatologists, philosophers, animal-rights lawyers and chimpanzees to investigate whether or not chimps should be classed as people. The reason for this scientific show-down is simple: if chimps can talk, cook and reason, they must be people, thinks Danny. But some scientists disagree, despite the fact that they are the very people who have discovered that chimps can do these things.

Choice is a series aimed at youth and a joint initiative of the South African government’s HIV/AIDS communication campaign and the SABC. Choice gives thought and attention to the huge dilemmas South African youth are facing, and provides some expertise from people with the necessary training and/or experience. The talk show features real people confronting a dilemma. We first see them at their homes, where they tell us their stories, and again when they meet with an audience of contemporaries and advisors to discuss their choices. After weighing all the advice, the person makes a choice. In the following episode, we find out the results of that choice. Choice is characterized by honest and open discussion of sex, faithfulness, love, peer pressure and money – which are usually private issues. By filming in a public venue we’re saying that as long as these issues contribute to the spread of HIV and AIDS and other youth-related issues they need to be spoken about in public.

Classical Masterpieces – 1 “An Alpine Symphony” by Richard Strauss

Original Title Monumente der Klassik - Folge 1:

“Eine Alpensinfonie” von Richard Strauss

Original Language GermanRunning Time 26’Country GermanyGenre Documentary - Performing ArtsTitle of Series Kent Nagano Conducts Classical*MasterpiecesYear of Production 2006Home Page www.dw-world.de/dw/0,2142,9697,00.html

Six master composers, six symphonies, a top orchestra and its star conductor: these are the main ingredients of this exceptional production, a documentary full of visual and technical innovation. The six-part series presents music from Mozart’s Symphony No. 41 (the “Jupiter” Symphony), Beethoven’s Symphony No. 3 (“Eroica”), Schumann’s Symphony No. 3 (“Rheinisch”), Brahms’ Symphony No. 4, Bruckner’s Symphony No. 8 and “An Alpine Symphony” by Richard Strauss. One special feature: the entertaining animated sequences, which show episodes from the lives of the composers. This element is designed to draw the viewer into the worlds of the composers. All the dialogues are based on original quotations from the composers themselves and their contemporaries. Conductor Kent Nagano explains the importance of each work, and where the emphasis lies in his interpretation.

In the 1970s, the American space probes Pioneer and Voyager were sent off carrying a message for any intelligent life forms they might meet. More than thirty years later, a television channel launches another hopeful signal into the sky. In autumn 2006, the European space programme put the COROT satellite into orbit. One of its main missions was to look for extrasolar planets, including so-called telluric planets, which are similar to the Earth. On 30 September at 20:45 a special programme was shown on ARTE and simultaneously beamed into space by a CNES (French Space Center) antenna. The substance of the programme is formed by the most incredible exchanges between Earth and space: fiction and documentary film excerpts, drawings, songs, animation, archives, and webcam images. With this programme, we put the tremendous communication tool of radio waves to good use: they carry the images and sounds of CosmicConnexion at the speed of light over astronomical distances.

Detective Montalbano: Find the Lady

Original Title Il Commissario Montalbano:il gioco delle tre carte*Original Language ItalianRunning Time 97'Country ItalyGenre Fiction - TV MovieYear of Production 2006Home Page

RAI Television has produced fourteen telefilms adapted from crime author Andrea Camilleri's novels featuring Commissario Montalbano, which have been translated into over thirty languages. In this episode, Find the Lady, the death of local construction magnate Girolamo Cascio leads detective Montalbano back to the murder of Cascio's leading competitor, Giacomo Alletto. Alletto was shot and killed two decades earlier and Rocco Pennisi, Alletto's partner, was sent to prison for the crime. But Montalbano discovers that it was Renata Dimora, Alletto's beautiful wife and Pennisi's lover, who masterminded the murder: together with Cascio, who later committed suicide after refusing to give money to the hired killer used to murder Alletto...

Dresden in January 1945, its baroque splendour still undamaged. Nazi propaganda is stubbornly promising Germany's final victory, but young Anna Mauth, a nurse at Dresden's Martin Luther Hospital knows better. In England the RAF Bomber Command has turned its attention to cities in the east of Germany, aiming to assist the Soviet Red Army with bombing raids in the back of the Wehrmacht. On return from a raid on Magdeburg, British pilot Robert Newman is shot down. Severely wounded and disguised in civilian clothes, he makes it to Dresden, where he hides in the hospital basement. There he meets Anna. Her professional desire to help him overcomes her distrust and fear; secretly she starts supplying him with food and fresh bandages. But she isn't yet ready to admit her true feelings about him to herself. Meanwhile, the RAF has prepared its next big raid and its target is Dresden. Only a few hours later the bombardment will raise a gigantic firestorm devastating the whole inner city.

Fata Morgana is a thirteen-part entertainment programme in which each week a city is given a major mission: to earn five stars by successfully completing five challenges. The inhabitants carry out – and hopefully succeed in – their tasks on their own. The key people organize, coordinate the research and find others who want to work day and night for one week. The whole town shares the fever of the race to success. This programme managed to bring together the entire population of different small towns and cities throughout Flanders. Can television have a real social impact?

10 x 28 minute docudrama about Finnish presidents at fateful turns in the country's history: moments when both the country and its head of state were at stake. These moments have put to the test the president's wisdom, decision-making skills and strategic eye, but also the man as a human being. The series retells one decisive moment in the lives of ten Finnish presidents from Ståhlberg to Ahtisaari. These moments also shed light on the history of this young republic. This episode, The Sacrificed President, is about Risto Ryti. The war is ending and Germany's loss seems inevitable. The Soviet Union is advancing in southern Karelia and expects to be in Helsinki in three weeks. The Soviets require Finland to surrender, unconditionally. Germany's foreign minister arrives in Helsinki. Germany wants Finland to fight alongside Germany and to refuse a separate peace pact. President Risto Ryti is between two fires. The events take place on 25 June 1944, Midsummer Day.

When the priest said “now you are man and wife,” Edilberto and Cristina had been having sex for a long time. Both considered good sex an excellent reason to get married, and today they are a young solid couple, united by love. At fourteen, Nydia had sex with her boyfriend for the very first time in her life. She said it felt wonderful, not only physically but also emotionally. Nydia understood, however, that she was into women and not into men. For her, the popular image according to which lesbians are sexually passive and sex is not important for them is only a cliché. In this chapter of the series, these and other youngsters express themselves about a topic they love: sex. They tell us, why, with whom, and when to have it. We hear the voice of those who have never had sex, those who love it, those who only have sex when in love, those who like men and women as well. It is all about voiceless youngsters talking boldly about sex.

Flanders Sports is not an ordinary sports programme. It aims not only to provide information about sports, it also wants to stimulate people to practice sport themselves. When the “Start running” podcast was launched in Flanders, no one could imagine that it would be such a huge success. The episodes were downloaded more than 200,000 times. Thousands of people were running with presenter Evy Gruyaert on their podcast. Because of this success, a second series was broadcast, on the theme of swimming. The Flanders Sports podcast was a pioneering project for the public broadcaster in the sense that so far, only podcasts of existing programmes had been made. This was the first time that completely new content was created for a podcast. The result was not only that thousands of people started to run, but that thousands also began to podcast for the first time in their lives.

Girl In A Mirror traces the life of photographer Carol Jerrems, a revolutionary Australian artist who died in 1980 at the age of 31. The documentary uses Jerrems' photographs, short films and writings, as well as interviews with friends and colleagues, to reconstruct her life and draw the audience into her world. This film traces Jerrems' rapid rise from gifted student to fully fledged, taboo-shattering artist, intercutting her own meticulous documentation, images and journals of her slow demise from a rare blood-related cancer.

Sometimes drama can deal with issues far better than current affairs or documentary. In this four-part series, Irish TV deals with a sensitive subject in a beautifully executed drama. Every year in Ireland children are taken from their homes in custody disputes. Husbands and wives spirit their children away and hide them from the other parent. This visually arresting series shot on a very tight schedule gets to the heart of the psyche of what can make any parent do the unthinkable. Taking place over 4 days, involving 4 main characters with a strong supporting cast, this contemporary series follows events in the life of the Holden family. The main focus, however, is on Paul Holden, a man suffering from trauma about a childhood tragedy he witnessed.

Hip-Hop: Beyond Beats & Rhymes provides a riveting examination of manhood, sexism, and homophobia in hip-hop culture. Director Byron Hurt, former star college quarterback, longtime hip-hop fan, and gender violence prevention educator, conceived the documentary as a “loving critique” of a number of disturbing trends in the world of rap music. He pays tribute to hip-hop while challenging the rap music industry to take responsibility for glamorizing destructive, deeply conservative stereotypes of manhood. The documentary features revealing interviews about masculinity and sexism with rappers such as Mos Def, Fat Joe, Chuck D, Jadakiss, and Busta Rhymes, hip-hop mogul Russell Simmons, and cultural commentators such as Michael Eric Dyson and Beverly Guy-Shetfall. Critically acclaimed for its fearless engagement with issues of race, gender violence, and the corporate exploitation of youth culture.

In 2006, The Pope's Children was a runaway Irish bestseller by TV pundit and economist David MacWilliams – the man credited with inventing the catch phrase “Celtic Tiger” for the booming Irish economy. The book dealt with the economics of Ireland's boom times in a witty and incisive, but non-politically correct manner. As a follow-up, RTÉ commissioned a three-part authored series that explored MacWilliam's themes, and was also presented by him. The result is a visually slick, part-dramatized walk through Ireland's Celtic Tiger. It was shown in prime time and drew huge audiences. Economics can be entertaining.

Original Title James Ellroy: “American Dog”Original Language EnglishRunning Time 53’Country FranceGenre Documentary - FactualYear of Production 2005 / 2006Home Page www.arte.tv/ellroy

This is the story of a life-long obsession, the life in question being James Ellroy’s. From a news item – the murder of Black Dahlia – to the slaying of his mother, this is the initiatory journey of a man and author who plumbed the depths of hell before finding redemption. Why do all his books keep returning to the same subject, with the same protagonists? Because his entire life, both as a man and as a writer, has revolved around a single obsession: the murder of his mother. A murder which became entangled with the killing of a girl known as the Black Dahlia, found naked and mutilated on a vacant lot ten years earlier. A series of contributors will provide key information to help better understand this rite of passage of a man who had all the traits of a serial killer, a man who is now one of the greatest thriller-writers of the age, a man for whom the journey is not yet over.

Job Wanted

Original Title Stellmichein! Aller Anfang ist schwerOriginal Language GermanRunning Time 30’Country GermanyGenre Documentary - Docu-SoapTitle of Series StellmicheinYear of Production 2005

An entertaining documentary series about the joys and pains of searching for a job in times of mass unemployment. In four episodes, Job Wanted accompanies five people from different backgrounds on the often rocky road to the career of their choice – or at least to a job that will allow them to get by. Job interviews are recounted in the form of animated sequences, which deliver a humorous commentary while also illustrating the events. Job Wanted is a tale of high ideals, unwelcome surprises, and tons of those well-meaning tips that are so damn hard to put into practice. True and sometimes very funny stories from the working world, told from the perspective of a few hopefuls that never give up in their search to someday ‘belong’ again.

Running Time 87'
Country Belarus
Genre Documentary - Current Affairs
Year of Production 2007

Three months before the elections the President of the Republic of Belarus, Alexander Lukashenko, claimed: “You have no other choice, you will vote for me!” This is exactly how it happened. The film’s shooting had already started two months before the elections in January 2006 and has continued to the present day. We are trying to figure out how it happened that 83% of the population voted for Lukashenko. The film will show the falsehood of the official propaganda and the ambiguous, sometimes polar, attitude of simple people towards everything that happens today in Belarus.

How is the Norwegian family doing? Is life focused on the time squeeze, clean socks, and transporting the kids to and from practice, school band, and friends? Or is life nice and pleasant with everyone gathered around a homemade pizza? Kristine Koht has done research on and spent time with several families, and in the course of eight programmes she presents her findings. Through probing questions, an active presence, meticulously recorded statistics, and an uncanny ability to gain people’s trust, Koht sketches a picture of the state of Norwegian families. We’re pleased to report that the Norwegian family is doing surprisingly well. Quite simply, Koht is deeply impressed by what the families are able to accomplish.

The goal of this programme is to discover and travel through the places still left in our world that could be called traditional. This project was started by a group of people with previous experience on similar programmes. The world is changing at an extremely fast pace. Cultural diversity is probably diminishing faster than biological diversity. Languages and ways of living are disappearing daily. We see human homogenization as one of the sad things happening to humanity. We travel light and try bring viewers to places that are difficult to get to but where traditional cultures are still alive. The basic team has four members: director, a screen partner (always a woman), a cameraman, and a producer. We are currently in the programme's sixth season. The programme we have selected is chapter two of the fifth season: a trip to the Kombai.

Original Title Let's Make A BabyOriginal Language EnglishRunning Time 57'Country United KingdomGenre Documentary - SeriesTitle of Series MischiefYear of Production 2005/2006

Mischief was an innovative and wildly ambitious series tackling topical and often serious issues by using humour combined with solid journalism and taking unique approaches to stories that are often only the preserve of more serious current affairs programming. In Let's Make A Baby – one of the lighter episodes in the series – the idea was to test how far reality TV makers and contestants would be prepared to go. A proposterous, fake but almost believable idea was hatched and then presented, promoted and pitched to the world's TV organizations. Auditions were held for willing contestants to take part in this most ethically grotesque reality TV format. Would anyone actually believe it was real? And worse, would anyone want to buy it and take part in it?

A man and a woman live in a village near Berlin. The city seems far away. They have loved each other since they were children. They are now in their thirties. Markus is a metal worker and a member of the local fire brigade. Ella works a couple of hours a week as a domestic and sings in the local choir. People eye them with a mixture of astonishment and suspicion: they seem so happy, so innocent, and sometimes as clueless as two children. Markus visits a nearby town to attend a training course with his fire brigade. That night there is a lot of drinking, laughing and dancing. The next morning Markus wakes up in the apartment of the waitress Rose. He can't recall much of what happened. When he tries to find out, it is the beginning of a love that is different from the one he knows – yet does not seem to affect the love for his wife.

Children's programming is often the last to receive money in public TV and yet it is one of the most competitive areas in terms of getting and keeping an audience. In Ireland, animation series are often bought from abroad and reflect American tastes. So how does a commissioning editor ensure that children's TV reflects local culture, yet remains imaginative, bright, cutting edge and addresses issues relevant to them? Can this be done economically with animation? Managing the Universe is an example of some of the short form multi-platform content that RTÉ is delivering to an increasingly diverse and media-savvy young audience. Short animations that do it all in a minute and without words. These sassy, trendy pieces are being downloaded from the web as well as watched on TV, and were initiated by the new children's commissioning editor as a move to encourage animators in Ireland and make youth programming on public TV relevant.

Manufactured Landscapes

Running Time 83'

Genre Documentary - Factual
Year of Production 2006

For almost three decades, internationally renowned Canadian artist Edward Burtynsky has been creating large-scale photographs of landscapes transformed by industry: quarries, scrap heaps, factories, recycling yards, dams. Manufactured Landscapes follows Burtynsky to China as he travels the country capturing the evidence and effects of China's massive industrial revolution. Rarely witnessed sites such as the Three Gorges Dam (50% larger than any other dam in the world), the interior of a factory which produces 20 million irons a year, and the breathtaking scale of Shanghai's urban renewal are subjects for his lens and our motion picture camera. Shot in sumptuous super 16mm film, Manufactured Landscapes extends the narratives of Burtynsky's photographs, meditating on human impact on the planet without trying to reach simplistic judgements or reductive resolutions. In the process, the film shifts our consciousness about the world and the way we live in it.

More Lipstick is a sketch program. Its primary target audience: girls between 13 and 15, with boys of the same age as a second target audience. One episode (the whole series is 8 episodes) consists of 11 sketches; each episode lasts 15 minutes. The actors in the series are 15 and 16 year-old girls. The sketches all focus on the everyday life and problems faced by girls that age, such as problems with their parents, their boyfriends and school. Being aware of how sensitive girls of this age can be, More Lipstick still tries to derive humour from sensitive themes. The sketches build around the "girlpower" idea; girls who speak up, girls who dare to criticize wrongdoings. And More Lipstick also points out that girls can be as tough as, or even tougher than, boys.

The new series Mothern takes a humorous look at the daily lives of four women who discover, the hard way, the real meaning of motherhood in this day and age. Inspired by a blog of the same name, which gathers tips on motherhood, in a few months it became one of the biggest hits on Brazilian Pay-TV. Mothern is presented by the GNT channel and shows the joys and dilemmas of these young moms on the verge of a nervous breakdown, trying to find a balance between family and professional lives. Children don't come with an instruction manual, and neither does the life of a modern mom. The series has an innovative format which mixes fiction and reality. While our characters try to resolve their issues, real-life statements analyze the themes being approached. Because of its great success. GNT is planning a second season, which should premiere in May 2007. The show definitely reaches its main target: during the broadcast of new episodes, 70% of the viewing audience is female.

This film is a documentary essay on money. It tells about the freedom and servitude of consumption in my own life. The power of money is everywhere. It lives in our house too. In the postwar era a new social model was created in Finland. I am part of the generation which has fully experienced the Finnish welfare society. It has meant free and equal opportunities to get education, health care, social benefits and security nets in the whole society. Now, a big part of this reality has changed. During the past ten years, Finland has turned into a very competitive country. A new kind of class society impacts on everyone. In this film look back to my childhood and my family. I try to analyze my values and I am willing to summarize my own position in this country.

Genre Documentary - Factual
Title of Series My Life As A Child
Year of Production 2005

The first programme in a new six-part series aimed at adults, made entirely by children between the ages of 7 and 11. Each child was given a camera and recorded his or her life over several months. The result is a unique insight into family life in Britain today, which reveals an astonishing understanding of parental behaviour by children, and is also an authentic portrait of childhood itself. This week, three children travel abroad to visit their estranged fathers. Mary (9) travels to Portugal to see her dad and his new partner. Kris (9) goes to Turkey to spend time with his father in Istanbul, and Ellen (7) flies to Tokyo to see her British father, who works there, and meet his Japanese girl-friend.

This adult-oriented programme comprises short sketches and a mock news show, all based on subjects familiar to regular office workers in Japan. The news of the week is a newly-invented printer called Clarifier, a machine that summarizes the Japanese office worker's e-mails in scarily blunt terms. Another sketch follows, about a Division Manager whose life goes spiraling out of control when a new employee joins his team. The new guy is fresh out of college but has the presence of a middle-aged manager. Also featured is a skit about a man's inner turmoil after receiving an e-mail from an attractive woman. A special feature is the stretch workout, helping a salaryman perfect his bowing techniques. Accompanying these humorous skits are segments with the president and CEO of Nissan Motors, Mr. Carlos Ghosn. He gives illuminating insights into business, answering questions put to him by regular office workers.

Nils and Ronny Without Borders - Getting to Know a Mass Murderer

Most people have heard of Médecins Sans Frontières (Doctors Without Borders), but what do they actually do? Nils and Ronny set off to find out. As always, they dare to combine humour with the deepest seriousness, as they investigate the organization and its work in Ethiopia. At a camp just south of the Eritrean border, they find Kaspar, a young MSF doctor on his first mission and the only Western doctor in the area. Together with the local staff, he is fighting against an 'unknown mass murderer,' the deadly disease Kala Azar. Nils and Ronny witness the tragic inadequacy of the treatment available: medicines against Kala Azar and similar diseases are either too expensive or non-existent. These illnesses kill millions in the Third World, but not in the West, so little research is done to find new treatments. Still there is room for smiles and laughter, especially when sunburned Norwegians bond with villagers in singing favourites from the Eurovision Song Contest...

Nuremberg: Nazis on Trial - Albert Speer

Original Title Nuremberg: Nazis on Trial - Albert SpeerOriginal Language EnglishRunning Time 59'Country United KingdomGenre Documentary - Docu-DramaTitle of Series Nuremberg: Nazis on TrialYear of Production 2006

It was the greatest trial of the twentieth century: in the dock at the Nuremberg war crimes tribunal, twenty-one leading Nazis charged with the crimes and horrors of the Third Reich. But the real story of Nuremberg took place away from the public eye, where lawyers and psychologists probed the minds of some of the most infamous men in history. Sixty years later, this three-part drama documentary series goes behind the scenes in the cases against the three most notorious Nazis on trial: Hermann Goering, Albert Speer and Rudolph Hess. Speer, Hitler's architect and armaments minister, was the only defendant at Nuremberg who unreservedly accepted responsibility for the Nazis' crimes. But was his remorse genuine or just a clever defence strategy to get off the hook? Episode 2 of the series provides fascinating insights into the ambiguous character of a man who many amongst the Allies regarded as a 'good' Nazi and a man they could identify with.

Ode to Joy

Original Title Oda do radosciOriginal Language PolishRunning Time 37'Country PolandGenre Fiction - TV MovieYear of Production 2005

This is the second part of a trilogy by three young directors: three stories and three visions of the Polish reality of today. What united Anna Kazejak, Maciej Migas, and Jan Komasa was not only the directing class at the Lodz Film School, but the need to make a film about their generation, its aspirations and values. In this film, they examine the motivations of those who decide to leave Poland. This phenomenon has been gathering momentum now that the borders of Europe are open, but has never yet been tackled in Polish cinema: the plight of a new generation, with its lack of prospects, and parents unwilling to take in their boomerang children, having fallen victim themselves to Polish-style capitalism. All this makes the young willing to try their luck in the 'better' world... Each filmmaker directed one of the three parts, but the stories unfold at the same time, with a common finale on board a coach traveling to London.

Original Title One Minute to MidnightOriginal Language EnglishRunning Time 13'Country AustraliaGenre Fiction - AnimationTitle of Series One Minute to MidnightYear of Production 2005

This series of short (1 minute) animations features anecdotes or moments from the lives of people over 60 from a variety of multicultural backgrounds. Some are joyful, others triumphant and still others poignant or creeping into tragedy. Their stories are as many and varied as anybody's, but most are touched with humour. They show what it is like to be an older person, here and now.

Operation X - Tricked into Porn

Original Title Operation X - Narret til pornoOriginal Language DanishRunning Time 40'Country DenmarkGenre Documentary - FactualTitle of Series Operation XYear of Production 2006

Operation X – Tricked Into Porn is the second in a two-part investigation into the world of frivolous model agencies. While doing research, the Operation X team comes across an astonishing kingpin who is behind more than twenty fake model agencies on the internet. He uses the agencies to trick 15 to 17 year-old girls into making child pornography. At the same time he is the only publicly employed safe-chat consultant in Denmark. He is known from his frequent media appearances, warning teenagers about the dangers of the internet. The programme goes undercover with hidden cameras to expose his actions, and finds out that besides producing child pornography, he uses his public position to extort money from one of the biggest internet companies in Denmark.

When I entered Warsaw Police Headquarters in 1999 for the first time, I saw warped wood floors and shabby furniture from the days of the former system. In the Homicide Division, I saw cops crying while questioning a woman who had murdered her baby. Later I learned they were seasoned officers, whose crime detection rate reached 90%... For the next three years, I recorded their work, as a casual observer. Most importantly, I could witness the private life of a homicide officer at close range. The result: two documentary series for TVP1, The Real Pigs, and Tapes of Terror. Unfortunately, the documentary genre could not convey the full range of emotion and experience that I witnessed. If I wanted to show the whole truth, I would have to make a kind of reality show filming their lives around the clock. But I would never have received permission to air most of the material. This is a story about values. Made in film noir style, it portrays the exploits of five Homicide Operational Officers.

Simon Laub is definitely not the Charles Bronson type. He is a liberal left-wing pacifist and a literature professor. He gets torn out of his easygoing, hedonistic lifestyle when his son Felix gets ripped off by Can, a Turkish youth. As he tries to interfere, he finds himself entering a violent world that he is not used to. Concepts of “respect” and “honour,” as used by his young antagonist, do not mean much to him. But his method of solving problems through talking does not work with Can. They provoke each other, and both make mistakes as a result of their misunderstandings, until they end up in a deadly spiral.

The online game Ideal Online introduces a new game zone, Hero Country. The game zone deals in profit, disputes, alliances and slaughter. This inverted image of reality is reflected entirely within the striking clothing and scenery. A convenience store employee in Ideal Online is facing marital crisis and divorce looms. Three hoodlums in Ideal Online are killed for gain by a brutal gamer. A female high school student and a primary school student in Ideal Online are now faced with a moral tragedy. In order to recoup what they've lost, gamers shuttle back and forth between the real world and the game zone. However, in today's crazy mixed-up world where the border between reality and the online world is blurred, given the desire and regret caused by living within these worlds, can the two worlds really complement one another? Can they make up for the gamers' loss and reward them with consolation?

Rosita

Original Title *RositaOriginal Language Spanish/English; English subtitlesRunning Time 56'Country NicaraguaGenre Documentary - FactualYear of Production 2005Home Page www.rositathemovie.com

Many people don't think a 9-year-old girl can become pregnant. But in 2003, the rape and pregnancy of 9-year-old Rosa was front-page news across Latin America. Rosa is the only child of Maria and Francisco, Nicaraguan campesinos working in Costa Rica as coffee pickers. When Rosa is raped a neighbor is arrested, but Rosa is pregnant and infected with venereal disease. Rosita is the story of this young family's battle to help their daughter. In Costa Rica – where Rosa is initially held in a hospital – and in their homeland Nicaragua, abortion is illegal. With growing public sympathy, their quest to end Rosa's pregnancy pits them against the Costa Rican and the Nicaraguan governments, the medical establishment, and the church. The filmmakers combine Rosa's words with animation of her drawings to recreate the family's journey, without violating the parents' wish that her face not be shown.

Shadya Zoabi, a 17-year-old Muslim girl from a small Arab village in northern Israel and a World Champion in karate, lives according to her own distinct principles and does not want to be like other Muslim women. Shadya's brothers are against her involvement in karate. In their view, a Muslim woman has a specific path in life – and it is forbidden to stray from this destiny. In spite of Shadya's father's support of her karate, the social pressure from her brothers and the surrounding community is difficult to overcome. Shadya is a story about the coming of age of a young Muslim woman who desires to succeed on her own terms, but who is still committed to her life within the Muslim community. Will she succeed in balancing her ambitions after her marriage? Will she remain a World Champion?

Smiling in a Warzone

Original Title Smiling in a WarzoneOriginal Language DanishRunning Time 77'Country SwedenGenre Documentary - FactualYear of Production 2005

Artist, pilot and filmmaker Simone Aaberg Kærn has been obsessed with female fighter pilots since she was little. When she hears about a young Afghan girl, Farial, whose dream is to become a fighter pilot, Simone decides to launch a remarkable art project. Buying the only plane she can afford – a tiny 40-year old Piper-Colt made out of canvas, that needs gas every three hours – she maps out a 6000 km flight plan from Denmark to Afghanistan. Her journey requires flying through a number of former war zones with heavily restricted airspace. Challenging every military authority she comes across, and in a truly remarkable scene, even defying the American military's refusal to allow her entry into Afghanistan, she flies illegally to her meeting with Farial. Archival footage of female fighter pilots from World War II and creative digressions to other flying heroines turn this travelogue into a tribute to all flying women and the freedom of the sky.

Souvenirs

Original Title SouvenirimOriginal Language HebrewRunning Time 75'Country IsraelGenre Documentary - Docu-DramaYear of Production 2006

Shahar is an unemployed filmmaker. His father Sleiman, a strict 82-year-old Yemenite, suggests that Shahar make a film about the Jewish Brigade in which he had served during WWII. Shahar becomes enthusiastic only when he realizes that his father may have left behind some 'souvenirs,' by having impregnated two Dutch women. He decides to make the film, hoping to find his father's lost offspring, and maybe take off some of the burden of his father's criticism. Retracing history by car, father and son set out together on the trail of the Jewish Brigade, beginning in Israel, through Italy and Germany, and ending in Holland with a surprising discovery. The film exposes the complex father-son relationship between Sleiman and Shahar with humor and compassion, and raises universal questions about the tension between myths of bravery and reality, and between memory and historical truth.

Sweepstake Scams

Original Title Fan Pien Te Chin TsuOriginal Language MandarinRunning Time 22'Country TaiwanGenre Fiction - SitcomTitle of Series Anti-Fraud SquadYear of Production 2006

Most Taiwanese have experienced phone calls from extortionists trying to defraud them of large sums of money. As the fraud groups' tactics become more and more sophisticated, the public is often caught off guard. In order to raise awareness of these scams, Public Television Service cooperated with the National Police Agency in reproducing a series of real cases adapted from calls received through the Anti-Fraud Squad Hotline. Through comedic exaggeration, the audience learns how fraud groups operate. This episode, "Sweepstake Scams," depicts two real-life cases. In the first case, Mr. Chang receives a message from a travel agency notifying him that he's won NT$500,000. The catch? He must pay the Gift Tax in advance. What should he do? In the second case, Miss Mei-Chu also won a prize. In order to claim it, she must use the service of "wire transfer by phone." She ended up owing NT$2 million to an underground bank. What happened exactly?

On 26 April 1986 the fourth reactor at the Chernobyl nuclear power station exploded, setting off a chain reaction that threatened to trigger a second, even more powerful explosion. For 8 months, 800,000 soldiers, miners and civilians worked around the clock to fight the radioactivity, building a protective shield around the ruined reactor. Eight months in hell, which the survivors aren't likely to forget. Covering a twenty year period, using 3D images and archival footage, the film re-enacts the relentless battle against an invisible and deadly enemy.

The Border

Original Title Chek AraOriginal Language Kyrgyz and KazakhRunning Time 20'Country KyrgyzstanGenre Fiction - TV MovieYear of Production 2006

Four Kyrgyz migrant workers are transporting the corpse of their comrade, who died unexpectedly, from Kazakhstan back to their homeland. When they go through passport control on the border, it appears that the deceased doesn't have the right identity card. The corrupt border guard forces the workers to pay him off. Corruption and bribery on the border, which have become common these days, seem especially blasphemous and cynical in the face of death. A conflict flares up between the Kyrgyz migrant workers and the Kazakh frontier guards, quashing their hopes to reach their homeland. Finally, their kind-hearted Kazakh truck driver helps them return home. The Border not only treats the problem of crossing geographic borders. It also questions the borders of human behavior and morality. The idea is that every human living on the Earth should follow the laws of morality, humanism and compassion.

Thirteen years ago Stephen Lawrence’s death became embedded in the UK’s psyche. Three failed police investigations mean the killers still remain at large. Mark Daly, the reporter behind the BBC’s BAFTA-winning Secret Policeman, spent a year investigating Britain’s most famous unsolved murder. Daly presents compelling new evidence which fundamentally challenges the alibis of the five main suspects and reveals that police corruption helped shield the killers from conviction. A unique and revealing documentary with unprecedented access to intelligence, detectives, new witnesses and never-before-seen footage, this is the definitive account of the murder of Stephen Lawrence.

In just one season, The Chaser’s War On Everything has become a cornerstone Australian entertainment programme, securing ABC TV’s formidable reputation for broadcasting the best in groundbreaking, unique comedy. Each week, the Chaser boys poke fun at national and international politics, sport, celebrities, big business, and whatever else pops up in Australian news: all with the hallmark Chaser flair, individuality and take-no-prisoners attitude, making for compelling, edgy social commentary. The Chaser approach to comedy includes satirizing topical issues with real-life experiences. For example, in Episode 25, Julian Morrow demonstrates the inadequacies of Australia’s terrorism protection at Australian airports. At the height of the passenger profiling controversy, Julian books two online Virgin Blue e-tickets for a flight from Sydney to Melbourne under the names of Terry Wrist and Al Kyder.

Original Title Sedzia Glowny - Noc ArtystowOriginal Language PolishRunning Time 61'Country PolandGenre TV - InteractiveTitle of Series Artists' NightYear of Production 2005

Artists' Night is a TVP culture programme featuring modern avant-garde off-art: a kind of artistic Hyde Park Corner, an uncensored platform for artistic statements. As the programme makers see it, happenings, performance art, installation, music video, and artistic provocation are a modern, uncompromising means of social communication. It is no accident that Artists' Night is interactive in character. The viewer is not merely a passive consumer of art here, but an active part of the artistic action played out live in the TVP Kultura studio. Joining the artists in their games, viewers must face uncomfortable questions regarding their role in social and media games. How strong is the media impact on modern society? Can a TV message become a tool of violence? These are some of the questions posed by the artists of The Chief Referee, the hostesses of Artists' Night.

The Last Dog in Rwanda

Original Title Den sista hunden i RwandaOriginal Language Swedish/EnglishRunning Time 29'Country SwedenGenre Fiction - TV MovieYear of Production 2005

Like many 10-year-old boys, David is fascinated by war. He builds plastic models of all kinds of military vehicles and plays war games with his friends. At the age of 24 he establishes himself as a news photographer, with the world's theatres of war as his field of occupation. We meet him in Rwanda in May 1994 in the midst of the genocide of Tutsis and moderate Hutus. Together with Mats, a reporter 30 years his senior, he travels through the war-torn country in order to depict the massacres. The Last Dog In Rwanda is a film about the fascination of war and the connection between the little boy's exciting wargames and the attractiveness of real wars to the adult. How far can one push the limits and extend moral values and ethics to get the perfect picture? The movie is based on star photographer Jens Assur's own experiences in Rwanda.

The Planet is a fresh attempt to find answers about the truths and untruths of the alarming global changes that many claim are already in motion. It is the most extensive documentary project ever produced in Scandinavia. The film crews have been working for more than two years and have visited over twenty-five countries around the world. The extraordinary visual style and the unexpected content in The Planet will unlock the alienated attitude many people have built up in relation to the subject. The Planet is about much more than climate change. It's about the Earth as a whole and the overall global changes we are experiencing right now.

The Plot Against Harold Wilson

Original Title The Plot Against Harold WilsonOriginal Language EnglishRunning Time 90'Country United KingdomGenre Documentary - Docu-DramaYear of Production 2006

When this film was aired in March 2006 it caused national news headlines, and columnists demanded an independent inquiry into its revelations. The film dramatizes tapes of secret conversations between former British Prime Minister Harold Wilson and two BBC journalists, recorded weeks after Wilson's shock resignation in 1976. Broadcast for the first time, the tapes reveal that while he was Prime Minister, Wilson had learned that sections of the British intelligence and armed services were organizing a military coup to replace his Labour Government with a junta headed by the Queen's cousin Lord Mountbatten. James Bolam gives a compelling performance as the embattled Prime Minister in the twilight of his career, trying to discreetly lead the journalists to the conspirators. Revealing new interview footage with senior politicians, military and intelligence officers shows just how close Wilson and the journalists came to exposing an attempt to undermine democracy that dwarfs Watergate.

Original Title Woman see lot of thingsOriginal Language EnglishRunning Time 65'Country FranceGenre Documentary - FactualYear of Production 2006Home Page www.bodylab.org*www.womanseelotofthings.com

During the decade-long civil wars in Liberia and Sierra Leone, many girls were abducted and raped, forcibly recruited, or volunteered for protection. In addition to combat duties, many were subject to sexual abuse; some taken as 'wives' by rebel commanders, impregnated and forced to brutalize others. This programme portrays the lives of three female ex-combatants in post-war Sierra Leone and the psychophysical adjustments they undertake in order to come to terms with their traumas. Anita Jackson, Mahade Pako and Chris Conteh were asked to tell their stories through various modes of performance: talking in different languages, acting out scenes from their past, pointing out key locations on maps, singing and dancing, using animated drawings. The experiences and opinions they share provide encouragement to other women with similar experiences, and give us insights into the problem of child combatants, which is a reality in at least forty other countries.

Yaptik-Hasse

Original Title Yaptik-HasseOriginal Language NenetsRunning Time 31'Country RussiaGenre Documentary - FactualYear of Production 2006

Yaptik-Hasse is one of the younger members of the very large Yaptik family, and also their good spirit. As it is the end of August, the Nenets people begin their usual journey through the 'middle-world' between North and South, setting off from their camp in the tundra, on the Yamal peninsula. Filmmaker Edgar Bartenev chooses three different means to tell the story of the breathtaking everyday life of these Siberian nomads: music, intertitles, and a camera. The result is one of the most exciting forms to reanimate the ethnographic genre.

Public Service Broadcasting and New Media: Strategies and Financing

The evolution and exponential growth of New Media have created new challenges in many fields, including television broadcasting. This evening panel presented together with Prix Moebius will raise the question of which strategies public service broadcasters should adopt in order to respond to this continuously evolving sector. Such strategies call for the renewal of television forms, but also for new financing structures. Among the questions public service broadcasting has to face:

- Should broadcasters follow commercial networks in increasing the percentage of advertising, at the risk of levelling down quality and creativity?
- Would they reach higher levels of quality and innovation if they were to rely solely on public funding without licence fees or advertising?
- Could they become self-financing by selling their content and formats to digital and satellite platforms and telecommunications companies?
- What about replacing licence fees with a percentage system based on taxable income?

Exploiting the potential of New Media requires a shift from tried-and-true methods toward new programming and financing strategies. What new guidelines can public service broadcasting adopt to reach these goals?

Citizen Journalism: A Debate

Internationally renowned media experts, scholars and television producers examine the role currently played by citizen journalism and open-source journalism, and critically assess these efforts in terms of journalistic viability, reliability and credibility.

Vicky Taylor BBC News interactivity editor

Vicky Taylor joined the BBC News website in 2001 as editor of interactivity. Since then the website has increased its interactive and debate areas and used its user-generated content as a resource for other BBC news outlets, from World Service to News 24.

Dr Stephan Russ-Mohl Professor, Faculty of Communication Sciences, University of Lugano, Switzerland
Stephan Russ-Mohl is professor for journalism and communications management at the University of Lugano, Switzerland, and the director of the European Journalism Observatory in Lugano.

Kim Jeong-Hun Producer at OhmyTV

Kim Jeong-hun is a producer at OhmyTV, the television division of South Korea's number-one citizen journalism website OhmyNews.

Bernard Rappaz Director of digital content, Télévision Suisse Romande (TSR)

Bernard Rappaz is in charge of multimedia projects at TSR, the French-language broadcaster of SRG SSR idée suisse.

The Most Popular Programmes

“To make popular programmes good, and good programmes popular” is the declared goal of public service broadcasters. Input has traditionally been more concerned with the good than with the popular. But now, in this special session, we have the rare opportunity to see top-of-the-ratings programmes from 2006 from all over the world. The ratings seem to be dominated by commercial broadcasters. But not everywhere, and not always. In some countries and on some occasions public service broadcasters come out on top. Traditional family viewing; those rare game and music shows that beat out their commercial rivals; series that are both good and popular: all examples of a recipe for success on public channels. In one country a public service drama series drew an unbelievable 88% share of the television audience! Which country, which drama series, why and how – maybe there's even something to take home from this session. On our trip around the world we see examples of the most popular programmes from Austria, Japan, Finland, Switzerland, Spain, Sweden, South Korea, South Africa and Denmark. We also hear about the newest data and research. Which genre is the most popular on which continent? What are the differences between the most popular programmes on commercial and on public service channels? And then the old question remains: “If it is popular, can it be good?”

Tradition... is most popular

Clips from programmes which are traditionally annually repeated, connected with a certain festive day which endorses traditional get-togethers and family viewing.

Games and shows... are most popular

Clips from (made for television) shows and events repeated annually, and weekly game shows.

Soaps... are (always) popular

Some soaps are popular and some are not, no matter how hard you try. Or haven't you tried hard enough?

IN-magina Media, Art and TV in Interaction

From the start, Input has always welcomed artistic approaches to television. Just as it encourages the development of public service broadcasting by screening and debating outstanding programmes from around the world, it also puts the focus on the interaction between visual art and television. Input 2007 Lugano and Innet, an interactive web project, co-host this debate on the potential relationship between television language and artistic practice based on new digital media, and the need to include the results of artistic and technical experimentation in television programming. In particular, we will focus on the convergence of media forms based on the spread of digital technology. The new role which images play in “Interaction Design” can be considered one of the most important developments brought about by the evolution of electronic and video technology toward digital and interactive media such as computer graphics, virtual reality and internet. How does this development affect the aesthetic and socio-cultural sphere? And how can television respond to it?
